House to Act on Dry Repeal Today

20 VOTE MARGIN IS PREDICTED BY WET FORCES

Seek Speedy Action by States.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—With adoption of prohibition repeal by the house tomorrow, regarded by Democratic and Republican leaders as a certainty, steps were being taken today to bring up legislation providing for the conventions of ratification.

A checkup tonight disclosed that virtually all the absentee wet members will be on hand for the vote in the house tomorrow. The absentees will be mainly drys, many of whom desire to avoid being recorded. Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Democratic leader, said there will be at least 20 votes in excess of the two-thirds required for adoption of the repeal resolution.

Coming Up in Committee.

Although Speaker John Nance Garner said at first that federal legislation providing for the conventions of ratification would not be considered, if at all, until the next congress meets, it was learned tonight that the question of seeking such legislation at this session is to come before the house judiciary committee this week.

Inasmuch as no constitutional amendment ever has been submitted to conventions as provided by the prohibition repeal resolution, there is a widespread feeling in congress that action on the repealer will be expedited by federal legislation laying down at least broad principles to be adhered to by the states in constituting the conventions. Otherwise, it is contended, much time would be wasted by state legislatures in working out the convention formula and governors might hesitate to call special sessions of legislatures because of the expense entailed by such delays.

Representative F. H. La Guardia is drafting a bill embodying the plan proposed by A. Mitchell Palmer, who was attorney general at the close of the Wilson administration. Mr. Palmer would have congress enact a law prescribing in great detail when the conventions shall be called, how they shall be constituted and how they shall be conducted.

Plan Commands Support.

This plan commands considerable support in both houses. Its sponsors believe that if it is adopted it will be possible to procure ratification of the repealer in three or four months at the most. Otherwise they fear that three or four years will be required. Nothing is more important, they argue, than expeditious wiping out of national prohibition, which, in their opinion, will turn the tide of the depression and start the country back to prosperity.

Prohibition, from the viewpoint of the wets, is an important factor in the cause of the depression. It has cost the country up to date 35 billions of dollars, according to a study made by the Crusaders. Such enforcement as obtains is costing 65 millions a year. At the same time the federal government is deprived of a liquor revenue estimated at one billion dollars a year.

Possible Saving Cited.

With the cost of enforcement eliminated, with a billion dollars a year flowing into the treasury, with corporation and other income tax revenue increased by the revival of the brewing, distilling and ancillary industries, the deficit would be wiped out and the budget balanced without resort to further taxation. Agriculture would reflect the effect of increased demands for corn, barley, rice, rye and other grains, grapes and other fruits used in the manufacture of malt, vinous and spirituous beverages and employment would be increased in numerous industries.

Congress, it is argued, would be derelict to its duty if it allowed these economic benefits to be lost for want of machinery to expedite action by the states on the repealer. The point is made that congress might well provide, in the interest of the general welfare, for the assumption by the federal government of the entire expense of holding the ratification conventions.

On the other hand, Representative

Evanston Sees Sunday Films; Protests Heard

Evanston residents viewed their first Sunday movies in the history of the suburb yesterday, but not without a final chorus of protest from opponents of the Sunday shows.

Some 400 persons met at the Haven school, adopted a resolution censuring Ald. Stanley Franzen for voting to repeal the ban on Sunday movies which has existed in Evanston since magic lantern days, and shouted down speakers who attempted to defend the alderman. One of the defenders, Attorney Newell Mecartney, shot back at the audience the suggestion that before they embark on a crusade against Sunday movies, church members keep their own premises clear of meetings of organizations with radical or communist leanings. He sat down amid a chorus of boos.

Win on Third Referendum.

The opening yesterday of the three Evanston motion picture theaters, all of which reported a capacity business, was made possible by a fight of eight years' duration. It began in 1925, when there was a referendum vote against Sunday movies. A 1927 referendum had the same result, but in April, 1931, Evanston citizens voted by a majority of 56 in favor of keeping the showhouses open.

Members of the city council voted at that time for a resolution holding that the referendum was not binding upon them, but in January of this year, by a 9 to 7 vote, repealed the prohibitory ordinance. Mayor Charles H. Bartlett vetoed it, but Ald. Franzen and another alderman who had voted against Sunday movies changed their stand and with their help the repealer was passed over the mayor's veto, by an 11 to 5 vote.

Upholds Majority Rule.

The meeting yesterday was called by the North End Improvement association. Attorney Eddy F. Brandt introduced a resolution pointing out that the 6th ward, which Ald. Franzen represents, had voted against Sunday movies in all three of the referendum elections and "condemning and disapproving" his vote for them. Ald. Frenzen, who was not present yesterday, had explained previously that he changed his vote because he disapproved of Mayor Bartlett's overturning the action of a majority of the council by a veto.

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCullough, veteran of a dozen reform movements, and the Rev. J. Julius Steffens, rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal church in Evanston, spoke for the resolution of censure.

"Sunday movies will be training schools for activities which keep children away from Sunday school," charged the minister.

Protests Red Activities.

"It is pretty well established that this is the churches' fight against the movies," said Attorney Mecartney. "The churches should clean their own skirts first. I refer particularly to the First Methodist church, which allows its premises to be used for Red meetings." The meeting at the First Methodist church, several weeks ago, was one of the Civil Liberties union.

When the question was put on the resolution censuring Franzen, Roy L. Davis, president of the association, ruled that it had carried by a standing vote.

Ollie Smile, a real estate broker, and Attorney Thomas F. Dolan, who spoke in defense of Ald. Franzen, demanded a poll of those present, predicting that it would show that many of those criticizing the alderman for going against the wishes of his constituents were residents of other wards. They were interrupted by boos and shouts of "Sit down," and were ruled out of order by Davis.

Nuncio Horns His Way Into a Police Cell

Nuncio di Pascale was all wrapped up in his music at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. He was entwined in the coils of a mighty brass sousaphone, the grandfather of all tubas, as he reclined against an elevated pillar at Wabash avenue and 7th street. His lips rested against the mouthpiece of his instrument and the heavy notes struck on the eardrums of sleeping guests in nearby hotels like a pile driver. There was a flood of telephone complaints to the South State street police.

A few minutes later Policeman Patrick F. Kelly untangled Nuncio and led him before Desk Sergeant James Nugent. Nuncio gave his name as Pasquale Caruso of 26 East 18th street. He said he had played at a gathering of the Meat Dealers' association in the Stevens hotel Saturday evening, where the guests treated him liberally. As a result, he said, he became slightly unsteady and paused at the elevated pillar to rest.

"Drop That Disguise!"

"Get out from behind that horn," Sergt. Nugent ordered. "I know you. You're Nuncio di Pascale, hired by the Police post of the American Legion as director of its drum and bugle corps."

"Ah, an admirer," Nuncio bowed in reply. "For you, sergeant, I will play, what no sousaphonist has ever before attempted, the quartet from 'Rigoletto.' I will play all four parts. Only once before have I played this, and then I was rewarded with $50."

A Mighty Rumble.

Nuncio drew a deep breath and began. A thunderous staccato of gigantic rumbles, roars, and caterwaulings followed. Perspiration streamed from Nuncio's inflamed countenance.

"How much will you take to stop?" Nugent shouted.

"You bouldn't afford it," Nuncio replied without losing a note.

Policeman Kelly ended the serenade by wresting the instrument from Nuncio. He was taken to a cell and the sousaphone was deposited in a vault. Last night Nuncio was freed on a bond provided by his wife.

JAPANESE ARMY READY FOR BIG PUSH ON JEHOL

Huge War Machine Menaces China.

Ready to Quit League

TOKIO, Feb. 20 [Monday].—(AP)—Japan has decided to secede from the league of nations if the league assembly adopts its proposed condemnation of Japan's activities in Manchuria, it was learned today from a high official source.

Foreign Minister Yasyua Uchida has cabled this decision to Japan's delegation at Geneva, it was stated.

Only the time and manner of withdrawal remained undecided, this source said.

The privy council was scheduled to review the cabinet's decision Wednesday. Chances of reversal were considered infinitesimal.

Premier Makota Saito said Count Uchida would explain the decision to a camera session of the Japanese diet on Tuesday.

The Rengo [Japanese] News agency learned formal notification of withdrawal would not be sent to the league until Yosuke Matsuoka, Japan's special counsel there, returns to Tokio in mid-March.

CHINCHOW, Manchuria, Feb. 19.—(AP)—The most convincing indications were seen today that this week will witness the beginning of the long heralded Japanese and Manchukuoan assault on the Chinese province of Jehol and the opening of the most extensive international conflict the orient has seen since the Russo-Japanese war of 1905.

GEN. NUBUYOSHI MUTO.

With the fanfare of preliminary threats and ultimatum nearly over, the preparations of Gen. Nubuyoshi Muto, Japanese commander in chief in Manchuria, were near completion. Lieut. Gen. Kunaiki Koiso, chief of staff for Gen. Muto, was said to be the directing genius of the expedition.

[A Japanese ultimatum ordering Chinese forces immediately to evacuate Kailu, northern gateway of Jehol province, was received yesterday at Peiping. It was said at Chinese Manchurian headquarters that it would be disregarded, even though the Japanese threatened to attack at once. The Japanese were reported prepared to issue two similar demands to other Chinese officials.]

50,000 Men in Army.

The Japanese war machine, bristling with the newest destructive weapons, was pointed menacingly westward. Japanese leaders expressed confidence that five days after the advance was begun the Rising Sun banners would be within the shadow of the main objective, Jehol city, the ancient summer capital of imperial China.

Japanese columns, with less sturdy Manchukuoan troops sandwiched between, were expected to enter Jehol according to a thoroughly coordinated schedule. Authoritative estimates of the invading army placed the total at 50,000, nearly half of them Manchukuoans.

Estimates of the number of Chinese troops in Jehol ranged upward to 226,000. Some Japanese officers, however, calculated the number at 105,000, of which the regular troops of Chang Hsiao-liang, North China military leader, and Gen. Tang Yu-lin comprised 55,000.

Final Demands Issued.

Final demands on Marshal Chang to withdraw his forces from Jehol or an attack would be launched was issued in the name of the Changchun [capital of Manchukuo] regime, it was said, because the Japanese high command maintains this is a Manchukuoan domestic police expedition and that the Japanese army is merely as-

Federal authorities received information last night that Frank P. Parish, known as "The Boy Wizard of Finance," has gone into "voluntary exile" on the eve of his trial in the courts here on a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with the $35,000,000 Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company stock promotion. Parish is 36 years old.

Assistant District Attorney Joseph A. Struett, in charge of the prosecution, described the "voluntary exile" last night as simply a flight by Parish to evade trial, and said that he would appear in federal court this morning and ask that the young financier's $5,000 bond be forfeited.

Informs Lawyer of Flight.

Notice of Parish's apparent flight was contained in letters sent by special delivery from New York to his attorney, D. G. Warrick of Kansas City, now staying at the Congress hotel. Mr. Warrick informed Mr. Struett, who communicated with Capt. Thomas Callaghan, chief here of the secret service, to help find Parish.

Parish, if he has taken to flight, has done so under the illusion that he was being forced to trial today. Such is not the case. Ordered to trial on Feb. 20 before Judge Woodward, his lawyers obtained a change of venue on the ground of prejudice, and Judge Evan A. Evans of the Circuit Court of Appeals, to whom the case was sent for reassignment, set the trial for March 6. The new trial judge has not been named.

Hotel Expects Return.

At the Webster hotel, where Parish, his wife, and three children have been staying since his indictment, it was said last night that they were expected back today. Attorney Warrick and Prosecutor Struett said last night, however, that they were satisfied that Parish has left the immediate jurisdiction of the federal court. The letters, they said, offered sufficient reason for that belief.

In his message to Attorney Warrick, the indicted financier gave no hint of where he was going, or whether he was taking his family with him. He did say, however, that he planned to fight back, to make good to his stockholders and to all others who had faith in him. The tenor of his announcement was as romantic as his entire life, a life that saw him a millionaire at 18, and at 35 the owner of the old presidential yacht, the Mayflower.

Becomes "Voluntary Exile."

"I sincerely hope that my decision in this matter will not be in any way embarrassing to you," wrote Parrish. "I have made this decision without consulting you, feeling that it would be unfair to expect any one to give advice on such a personal matter."

In another paragraph, declaring his flight, Parish wrote he could see no reason for the demand made by Prosecutor Struett for an immediate trial, and added:

"Since I am faced with these demands and since I owe no debt to society, as I have not offended its legal or moral code, I am left with one alternative—that of becoming a voluntary exile."

Parish stated that he viewed such a move "without any shame whatsoever, as I do not see wherein anything is gained by sacrificing myself." He declared that he regarded the matter purely as one battle in a war, one battle in which, he said, he would be wise to retreat.

Blames "Big Business."

Throughout the letters young Parish charged that big corporations, big financiers, had sought to ruin him; that his present indictment resulted from their hostility to his rising power in the utilities field.

In his undertakings, Parish wrote,

DOCTORS WORRY AS MAYOR HAS RESTLESS NIGHT

Fever Climbs to 100, Then Recedes.

BULLETIN.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 20 (Monday.)—(AP)—Hospital attendants said shortly after 1 a. m. today that Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago was enjoying "a very comfortable rest." His temperature was 99.6, pulse 90, respiration 24.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
(Pictures on Back Page)

Miami, Fla., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—A fever which sent his temperature to 100.4 degrees, higher than any recorded since he was wounded Wednesday night, tonight hampered Mayor Cermak of Chicago in his struggle toward recovery.

His physicians prepared to meet a new crisis in the condition of their patient.

Although official bulletins continued to be reassuring, some of his physicians expressed less confidence in the mayor's progress. He passed a nervous and restless night in which his temperature went up to 100 degrees and there was some diarrhea.

As a result practically all visitors were barred from his room today and by tonight the mayor was more composed. His temperature, however, still fluctuated above the 100 degree mark.

Slightly Declining.

One physician said that while 36 hours ago he considered Mayor Cermak's chances slightly better than even for recovery, tonight he felt his chances had slipped slightly under the 50-50 ratio.

The doctors believe that the next 48 hours will determine whether the mayor is on the road to recovery or will develop complications which will make that recovery dubious.

In their official utterances the physicians made no mention of their misgivings. A bulletin issued at 9:15 p. m. declared that "slight fever" was to be expected due to absorption from injured tissue.

"We feel that his progress is slowly but steadily toward recovery," the bulletin signed by three physicians read. "There is no evidence of pneumonia or heart failure. The pulse is 84, respiration 20 and temperature 100."

In the 6:30 bulletin his pulse was 84, respiration 24, and temperature 100.4.

Gov. Horner Departs.

Gov. Horner of Illinois left tonight for Springfield after spending little more than 24 hou in Miami. He said the press of business in the state capital necessitated his return. He issued a statement before leaving in which he expressed confidence that the mayor will recover.

"The family and friends who are constantly at the hospital have sufficient assurances to make them feel that in a short time Mr. Cermak will be able personally to tell his friends throughout the nation by radio of his recovery an thank them for their many messages of cheer to him which have helped him mightily in the fight for recovery he is making," the governor said.

Heart Causes Worry.

As the mayor approaches the new crisis to the array of medical talent already at the bedside will be added Dr. Frederick Tice, noted heart and lung specialist, who for ten years has been the mayor's personal physician and friend. It is the mayor's admittedly weak heart which is causing the doctors' worry. Dr. Tice, who is head of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium in Chicago, will arrive here tomorrow morning.

The patient himself realizes the gravity of the situation. The mayor's cheerfulness had given way to fretfulness today. Most significant of the effect of the shock upon him is the meekness with which he obeys the physicians' orders, according to Mrs. Clara Beasley, his personal secretary for many years, who arrived here yesterday.

"Whenever he was ill before he used to order the doctors around," she said. "It was always a question of whether he would obey their instructions or not. It is a shock to see him taking orders without any remonstrance."

Although the physicians in attendance will number seven with the arrival of Dr. Tice tomorrow, no drugs, no advice, no medical assistance of any kind whatsoever can give the patient much aid in his struggle for life during the next two days. He must make the fight alone. His vigorous desire to live, his refusal to consider even the possibility of losing the battle inspire the doctors to a confidence that he will emerge the winner.

In fact, the patient's mental attitude has been largely responsible for the optimistic tone characterizing the health bulletins given out in the last two days, it was learned. Those at his bedside, sensing the steady courage of the patient, feel that he will recover because he will not consider any other outcome.

Despite his cheerful tone on leaving for Springfield tonight, Gov. Horner postponed a definite decision as to his departure until almost train time.

Worries Over Chicago.

"I got a real thrill out of talking to the mayor last night," Gov. Horner said. "I was sure then that he will pull through. I am disturbed to learn that the many visits somewhat upset him.

"He has Chicago's financial plight continually on his mind. He wanted to talk about ways and means of getting money to pay the city employés and school teachers. Many matters are pressing upon his mind and that does not help him."

Gov. Horner's own physician, Dr. Walter W. Hamburger, has reported the mayor's heart as functioning poorly. The governor commented upon this report, saying:

"Not many men 59 years old have strong hearts. I think the mayor has as good a chance as any man of his age."

Hold Zangara a Misfit.

As the mayor enters the crucial stage of his struggle tomorrow, Giuseppe Zangara, the gunman who shot him and five other persons when he tried to kill President Elect Roosevelt in Bay Front park last Wednesday night, will come before the bar of justice to answer for his crimes.

An insanity defense for the little Italian was eliminated as a possibility last night when a commission of physicians declared him a social misfit, one whose pet schemes and morbid emotions run in conflict with the established order of society. The report did not state definitely that Zangara was sane, but the general wording indicated that he was merely a perverse character whose brooding over fancied wrongs had made him dangerous to society. The nearest the physicians came to classifying Zangara's mind was to brand him a "psychopathic personality."

"The question of applying the term 'sane' or 'insane' to such misfits is purely a matter of legal interpretation of expediency which the courts are privileged to decide," said Dr. I. H. Agos, one of the commission.

Guilty Plea Probable.

The three lawyers appointed to defend Zangara would not reveal what plea will be made tomorrow. It was said that a plea of guilty was probable in view of the overwhelming evidence against the man and the fact that he has publicly pleaded guilty and voiced his motives for the act.

Should Zangara plead guilty, there will be a hearing at which he will be given a chance to testify and explain the reasons lurking in his distorted mind which caused him to commit the crime which shocked this nation and the world.

The talkative defendant, who likes to rant about his troubles, is expected to seize this opportunity eagerly if his attorneys permit him.

Judge E. C. Collins is then expected to pronounce sentence, probably fixing a term of years in the state penitentiary which will be virtually a life sentence. Zangara is charged with attempts upon the lives of four persons, including President Elect Roosevelt, and he may be given from eighty to one hundred and twenty years on these four counts.

Lawyers said a guilty plea was probable in view of the fact that Zangara would face a certain death sentence if either Mayor Cermak or Mrs. Joseph H. Gill, the other severely wounded victim of Zangara's pistol, should die. The defendant's own attorneys are said to agree that Zangara should be shut away from society and that with his present views he would be a menace to public safety if permitted at large.

Bride Confesses Killing Husband of Four Months

Wichita, Kas., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Police said Mrs. Faye Martin, 20, a bride of four months, had confessed she shot and killed her husband, Thomas R. M. Martin, 32, early today after a quarrel following her discovery of Martin in a restaurant with another woman.

ROOSEVELT PAYS HIS TRIBUTE TO FLORIDA HEROINE

Writes Woman Who Held Gunman's Arm.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—President Elect Roosevelt paid tribute today to the woman who courageously seized the pistol hand of the Miami gunman who tried to kill him last Wednesday night.

In a letter to Mrs. W. F. Cross, heroine of that exciting night, Mr Roosevelt expressed his appreciation of her bravery.

The President elect also issued a public statement acknowledging the thousands of telegrams and messages he has received from people in all parts of the world expressing their thankfulness that he had been spared from death.

Text of His Letter.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Mrs. Cross follows:

"My dear Mrs. Cross:

"It is hard for me to find words to convey to you my appreciation of your heroism and my gratitude for your prompt and courageous action in attempting to prevent the tragedy which occurred last Wednesday evening.

"How much greater and sadder a tragedy was averted by your unselfish courage and quick thinking of course no one can estimate. It now appears that by divine providence the lives of all the victims of the assassin's disturbed aim will be spared.

"You should always have a just and conscious pride in the part you played and I rejoice in this fine example of forgetfulness of self and cool courage.

"Gratefully yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

The statement expressing his appreciation of the messages sent to him follows:

"I am deeply touched by the thousands of telegrams and messages which have come to me regarding the deplorable occurrence at Miami last Wednesday. Were it possible I would like personally to express my appreciation to all of these friends but the demands on my time are such that it cannot be done. Therefore I must simply state to them that my heart is filled with thankfulness for their expressions of solicitude for my welfare.

"That all those who were injured will be fully restored is my fervent desire and daily prayer.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Sees Legion Commander.

Mr. Roosevelt this morning conferred with Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American legion, on a subject deemed by the President elect to be vital to the problem of balancing the budget. This was the question of how much can be saved by the federal government from the annual expenditures for services and cash payments to world war veterans.

It is generally conceded that this item, running to a billion dollars a year, must be cut almost in half before the expenditures can be considered justified. In no other department of the federal government, it is declared, can a more substantial saving be accomplished.

Most of the expenditures for veterans' services have been put in the federal budget at the insistence of the American legion, which has exerted continuous influence upon congressmen toward that end, and the President elect is understood to have asked Commander Johnson to use his influence now to induce the legion to stand for drastic reductions, at the same time promising to preserve those expenditures which are essential to the welfare of the veterans.

Both Are Noncommittal.

Mr. Roosevelt has taken the position that veterans disabled in the service of the nation ought to be given every consideration by the government, but he believes that many expenditures are now being made in behalf of men whose disabilities have no direct connection with the war at all. Neither Mr. Roosevelt nor Commander Johnson disclosed whether an agreement was reached between them on the subject.

The President elect conferred today with Prof. Raymond Moley, his principal economic advisor, and with William H. Woodin, who is understood to be slated for the secretaryship of commerce.

Mr. Roosevelt also consulted with Bernard F. Baruch, one of his chief "big business" supporters. He had luncheon with his mother, the other guests at the table including Ignace Paderewski and Col. Edward M. House.

The President elect tomorrow will confer at his home with Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, whose ship from England is due to dock here tomorrow. The hour of the ambassador's arrival has not been fixed as yet. He is expected to discuss with the President elect plans for the debts conference to be held between British representatives and the new administration almost immediately after March 4.

ARMY ORDNANCE SAYS SWAP DEBT FOR ISLANDS

Called One Way to Even Up Gold.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.—Swapping of war debts payments owed this country by Great Britain for British island possessions in this hemisphere was recommended today by Army Ordnance, a magazine pulished by the Army Ordnance association. The association is described as a national organization of citizens pledged to industrial preparedness. Its president is Benedict Crowell of Cleveland. Robert P. Lamont of Chicago is a director.

In recent years there has been considerable discussion of the advisability of making an arrangement with Great Britain whereby that nation would turn certain of her West Indies possessions over to this country in lieu of a part of the four billion dollar war debt owed the United States.

"From the standpoint of Great Britain or of the British commonwealth the loss of this territory is more than balanced by the additions to the British empire received from the world war, for whose conduct the present war debts were contracted," says the editorial.

"A settlement of international credits through exchange of sovereignty ought to help toward restoring an economic balance, toward restoring the balances of gold, toward making international obligations more highly respected in world areas. It might open a way to a new common sense era. Certainly there rests in this question an opportunity to establish safer world conditions all over our trembling planet."

MAYOR'S INJURY CURTAILS ITALY'S FAIR CEREMONY

Elaborate ceremonies planned for breaking ground yesterday for the Italian pavilion at A Century of Progress were simplified and shortened by Prince Spada Potenziani, representative of the Italian government, as a mark of respect to Mayor Cermak.

In the presence of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, Giuseppe Castruccio, Italian consul; Rufus Dawes, president of A Century of Progress, a delegation of distinguished Chicagoans, and more than 1,000 residents of Italian descent, Prince Potenziani turned a spadeful of earth and made a brief address, in which he expressed deep regret over the Miami shooting.

LOUISIANA MOB LYNCHES NEGRO AFTER SLAYING

Banker Slain Protecting Wife from Rape.

Ringgold, La., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Less than 14 hours after J. P. Batchelor, 51, cashier of the Ringgold bank, was beaten to death by a Negro near here, Nelson Nash, 24, who officers said confessed to the slaying, was lynched by a group of several score men, who hanged him from a tree.

Body Riddled with Bullets.

Nash was captured shortly before noon today by a citizens' posse. Officers said Mrs. Batchelor failed to identify him definitely as the Negro who killed her husband and attempted to rape her.

Authorities said, however, that Nash confessed. After he was hanged, about 50 bullets were fired through his body.

Batchelor and his wife were aroused from their beds early today by a Negro who compelled them to take him to the bank where he attempted to make the cashier open the door to the money vault.

The time lock was on, however, and the Negro then forced the couple, still in night clothes, to walk to a point about one mile north of here on the railroad track.

Captured Near Scene of Killing.

Officers said they learned the Negro attempted to rape Mrs. Batchelor, but her husband grappled with him and she escaped. Batchelor was beaten on the head.

Nash was captured about 15 miles from the scene of the slaying.

1,000 POLICEMEN ATTEND MASS AND PRAY FOR MAYOR

More than 1,000 Chicago policemen attended mass in a body yesterday at St. Jude's shrine, 91st street and Brandon avenue, received communion and offered prayers for the recovery of Mayor Cermak. They were led by Capt. John P. Stege, who organized the policemen into the St. Jude league recently. The Rev. James Tort, C. M. F., pastor, conducted services.

Word that prayers had been offered for him was sent to the hospital in Miami where Mayor Cermak is a patient by Ald. Henry Sonnonschein, his secretary for 25 years.

Services were held in many other Chicago churches yesterday at which the escape of President Elect Roosevelt from the assassin's bullets was made a subject of thanks and wounding of Mayor Cermak deplored.

Raid 75 Philadelphia Speakeasies; Find Bars

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Seventy-five raids, thirty of which resulted in discovery of liquor and in arrests, were made by police last night and today against speakeasies and gambling establishments in this city. The central section escaped with only one raid, that on the Tavern club. There, police said, they seized two bars, a three gallon jug of rye and other liquors.

GROUP OF ARIZONA LEGISLATORS HEARS RUTH JUDD'S STORY

State Prison, Florence, Ariz., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The dramatic story of the "trunk slayings" of Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson was related today by Winnie Ruth Judd, confessed killer, who had been condemned to death, to six members of the Arizona legislature.

Representative E. R. Pryor of Phoenix, a member of the party, declared it was the consensus of those present that Mrs. Judd was telling the truth and that they planned to aid her if possible.

Other members of the party were Representatives E. L. Christian, J. M. Combs, and Walter I. Ettleman, and Senators Perry McArthur, A. Minister, and John C. Riggs, all from Maricopa county.

Mrs. Judd's story, the latest move of herself and her counsel to have her death sentence commuted, carried a subtle plea that the legislators take some action to aid her cheat the gallows. The Arizona pardon board will hear her "whole truth" self-defense story March 6.

NEAR NORTH SIDE IS SHAKEN BY BOILER BLAST

A boiler explosion, which was heard over a wide near north side area, including the gold coast, wrecked the basement of the National Fur Dressing and Dyeing company plant at 1408 North Halsted street last night. The blast shook the immediate vicinity and shattered windows in neighboring factories and homes.

Two employés who were in the plant were thrown to the floor by the explosion. The two—Dominic Colucci, 558 North Artesian avenue, and Sando Vaccord, 1820 Emerson street — escaped injury because they were in the forward section of the building, farthest away from the boiler.

The blast knocked out the rear basement wall and broke every window in the two story structure. Samuel Broder, 720 Winnemac avenue, president of the company, estimated the damage at less than $1,000. Investigation by firemen indicated that the boiler exploded because of low water.

DANUBIAN WOES LAID TO EUROPE'S WAR DEBT DRIVE

Survey Shows 'Big Power' Politics Hurt Balkans.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Feb. 8.—[By Mail.]—Politics involved in the European drive to sidestep war debts due America appear to be an outstanding cause of whatever economic depression exists in the Danubian countries.

A survey of the Balkan peninsula also leads directly to the conclusion that every nation with the possible exception of Hungary is rich enough to balance its budget and pay its debts if its economic machinery had not been dislocated and its money devaluated through the general abandonment of the gold standard in late 1931.

The conclusion is unavoidable, too, that these smaller countries, by choice or by compulsion, are mobilized in that larger European campaign to free Europe of all indebtedness to the United States. This is the policy that lurks behind benevolent sounding formulas about coöperation, about the world being an economic unit, and about the welfare of one being dependent upon the welfare of all. So at least it appears from the Balkans.

Little Idleness Exists.

The Balkan countries are overstocked with food and provisions. It is obtainable by all classes. Countries like Jugo-Slavia, Greece, and Rumania have little or no unemployment.

But since the abandonment of gold the devaluation of foreign bills held in the treasury portfolio as reserves behind note circulation has caused a devaluation of Balkan money and the Balkan nations can buy nothing beyond their own frontiers.

This has led to the erection of an economic Chinese wall around each country. Money cannot be exported. A traveler going from one country to another can get barely enough currency of the country to which he is going for his personal needs. Every registered letter must be submitted open to the postal authorities. This is to prevent money of a stabilized value from being exported. The result is a complete economic paralysis.

Cried for Markets.

Representatives of all these countries met at Stresa last fall and clamored for market facilities from their big neighbors, Italy, France, Germany, and England. Nothing could be granted them, according to the Balkan peoples, because each of the four big countries had a different marketing scheme, behind which were hidden political ends, and no nation would accept the plan of another.

The conclusion is that there is no desire by those who are really managing the game to see an end of depression until the American war debts have been reduced or canceled and their own political ends in Europe attained.

Economic suppression rather than depression appears a more adequate description of conditions in central Europe, where the United States was led to believe two years ago that a world crisis started with the collapse of the Credit Anstalt in Vienna. Economic suppression takes the form of government control over all exchange operations and all importations of foreign goods. A Bulgarian, a Greek, or a Rumanian cannot import anything without his government's consent.

Jugo-Slav money is undesirable and no good in Rumania. For the purpose of protecting its currency no nation buys anything from its neighbor. All nations seek to become self-sufficient.

Living Conditions Good.

Every one, however, has it drilled into him that these conditions have been brought about by the war debts to the United States and not by the schemes which are being engineered to get them canceled.

At the same time living conditions for the masses of the people in these central European countries are not burdensome or intolerable. There is far less poverty and idleness proportionately than in the United States. Even during a severe winter distress and hardship has been at a mini-

PRESIDENT VON HINDENBURG.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—Outside official circles in Germany, in which the subject is taboo for journalistic purposes, certain apprehensions are beginning to be expressed regarding the continued good health of the venerable President von Hindenburg. Undoubtedly these have their origin in the remarkable series of political developments of the last two months, which finally placed Adolf Hitler in the chancellor's office. Germans fear that even the most rugged constitution and mentality of the 85 year old field marshal will not be able to endure the strain which he is now under.

However, all the official information available on this point, under the new governmental regime, is wholly reassuring as to the health of the aged president. Meanwhile the forebodings continue to be confidentially whispered in quiet corners.

GERMAN LAND BARONS DEMAND FREE FARMHANDS

Propose to Draft Men to Till the Soil.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, economic and agriculture czar in Adolf Hitler's cabinet, is doing his best to fatten the German land baron. The success the Nationalist leader and staunch friend of former Kaiser Wilhelm has had was indicated last Tuesday when President Paul von Hindenburg signed an emergency decree extending a moratorium on mortgaged estates and farms to the entire reich. Thus the landed aristocracy was provided a breathing spell until Oct. 31, 1933.

The cries of the Junkers—"make our farms profitable again! Hold off the creditors! Loan us more money!" have been heard and obeyed.

Comes to Farmers' Aid.

By forbidding forced sales of lands and even mobile property which might be auctioned off to satisfy debts, including grape wines, the government as in the past has come to the rescue of the big farmer. It has been waging his battles for him with a two edged sword.

With one edge it has been prying high the prices of agricultural products and with the other it has been trimming his costs ruthlessly, chiefly at the expense of creditors and employés.

With high tariffs protecting him from foreign competition, he increased his planted acreage to such an extent that a large internal surplus of wheat and rye threatened to cause the prices to collapse. To prevent this the reich established a fund of $42,000,000 to bolster the prices. Already the grain board has purchased 330,000 tons of wheat and is ready to go even further.

Feeling secure, the land barons have turned their guns into new directions. They are pointing at wages on the large estates—and in connection therewith the social services paid to protect farm workers against old age, illness, accident, and idleness. There are the taxes, too.

Fattening Process Explained.

Important costs of agriculture for 1932 were calculated by the government as follows: Cash wages, $336,000,000; taxes, $141,500,000; interest payments, $212,000,000, and social insurance, $61,000,000.

Under former Chancellor von Papen, emergency decrees gave the Junkers a chance to pay their farmhands below the wages called for by collective contracts. Now plans for a compulsory labor service are being prepared to provide employés in exchange for board and lodging.

Taxes, too, were reduced for the farmers at the same time that they were being raised and multiplied for white collar workers and industrial labor. The sum of $40,000,000 was lopped from the tax total, leaving a bare $100,000,000 as the tax payments of 11,000,000 farmers.

So far as interest paid by agriculture is concerned—thereby hangs a tale. A decree by former Chancellor Heinrich Bruening first helped to make life easier for the farmer as a debtor. Interest rates on mortgages and on other debts were trimmed down, especially the high interest rates.

Then came Von Papen. He went a few steps further, relieving the agricultural interests of the necessity of paying $69,000,000 interest. On farm mortgages as well as on personal credits, interest rates were reduced 2 per cent in so far as such a reduction would not bring the total paid below 4 per cent.

Then came the farm moratorium.

mum. Food may be obtained cheaply by the lower classes, 80 per cent of whom in all the central European countries work at agricultural pursuits.

Meanwhile life for the middle and upper classes flows on with its usual rhythm in the various capitals.

On the surface Bucharest reeks with glittering, if disorganized, opulence. There is heavy eating and drinking in the restaurants and cafés. Tables at the big cafés such as the Corso, opposite the royal palace, are available only to those who go early. The night clubs are crowded.

Belgrade is a comfortable, animated capital. Its restaurants, cafés, and hotels give no signs of depression. The Jugo-Slavs say they have no unemployment. There are few beggars and no sign that any one goes hungry. The theaters are crowded and the night clubs with Russian entertainers run along till dawn.

The Bulgarians are overloaded with debts that have been accumulating since the Balkan wars. Life is simpler in Sofia, the capital of a distinctly agrarian and peasant people, but signs of actual distress are lacking. Certainly it was not apparent among the crowds of shoppers on the Bulgarian Christmas eve nor the Christmas eve parties.

Even about Vienna there is an air of sufficiency and organization. And a moving business city still flows about the great, gaunt building of the Credit Anstalt, that fulcrum on which the Hoover moratorium was pried.

We Want Liberty! German Republican War Vets Cry

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—"After Hitler we Republicans will have to tidy up the mess he will leave behind," Karl Hoeltermann, leader of the Reichsbanner, Republican organization of war veterans, shouted in the Lustgarten today as the organization concluded a three day convention. About 80,000 persons assembled for the demonstration.

Republican rallies were held throughout Germany today. Three Reichsbannermen were killed in clashes with Nazis at Chemnitz, Dobereau, and Wuppertal. Eighteen persons were injured in the melees.

Fixes "Liberty" as Slogan.

"Freedom is our slogan," Hoeltermann said in his address. "Our cries for liberty must be heard in Wilhelmstrasse and police headquarters, where Admiral Levetzow [chief of police] has swung his club 'verboten' three times today.

"First he prohibited our military and sport training exhibition and then he prohibited a demonstration of the Socialist Liberty and Culture association. Finally he broke up a meeting of the Free Speech congress. We Reichsbannermen defended Germany's liberty in the front line trenches against foreign enemies. We shall defend our freedom against enemies in our own country."

The meeting of the Free Speech congress was dispersed by police, who charged that abuse of Hitler's government and religious institutions was contained in an address by former Prussian Minister of Justice Wolfgang Heine. One speaker ironically pointed out that the Nazi swastika emblem had been exhumed from old Jewish graves.

Manifesto by Author Mann.

A manifesto by Thomas Mann, famous author and Nobel prize winner, was to have been read at the suppressed meeting of the Liberty and Culture association. In it the author said:

"The fury of nationalistic passions is only the last flicker of an expiring fire. The bourgeois human being belongs to the workers in a social democracy."

Hopes of Republicans that Hitler would resign in the event the nation votes against him at the reichstag election on March 5 were branded as ridiculous at a political rally at Dresden today by Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick.

"We shall not retreat from the posts we now occupy should the elections fail to give our government a majority," he said. "We shall continue our work for the rescue of the people. Our opponents charge that the new national government has failed to provide work and bread, has reintroduced only 'verbotens' and has failed to draw up a program. The name 'Hitler' in itself is a program."

Threatens Armed Force.

Frick, who was introduced by Prince August Wilhelm, favorite son of the former kaiser and one of the Nazi leaders, threatened to send punitive expeditions against Bavaria and Saxony, where the government's measures are being vigorously assailed and where monarchistic aspirations run high.

Prohibition of Catholic Centrist newspapers for publishing an election appeal by Catholic unions raised such a storm of protest that Capt. Hermann Goering, Nazi minister without portfolio who is also serving as Prussia's minister of interior, lifted the ban today. The newspapers were suppressed yesterday for three days.

Goering lifted the suspension after conferring with Centrist leaders including the former Chancellor Wilhelm Marx. The Centrists announced that no insult to the government was meant by the election appeal and that they only sought to express their anxiety over the present situation.

Both Hitler and Goering are Catholics, but they have failed to induce the Centrist party to approve the government's program.

PERSIA ACQUIRES SECOND LARGEST AIR FLEET IN ASIA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TEHERAN, Persia, Feb. 19.—A large place of land outside Teheran has been prepared by the Persian government as a building site for hangars in which the 40 airplanes recently purchased in London from an American firm will be housed. The planes are expected at a Persian port soon. Upon their arrival, they will be flown to Teheran by Persian pilots.

Twenty scout planes bought in England for military purposes have already arrived. The war office now points proudly to its air force, which is second in strength only to Japan in Asia. It is considered that with the mountainous and arid nature of the country, a large air force is essential to Persia's defense.

Purchases of planes in the United States and England have extracted from the soviets a promise to supply all the military aircraft needed on long credit terms. There are now reported to be 400 pilots in Persia.

FRANCO-ITALIAN RELATIONS TENSE AS CHARGES FLY

Nations Clash on Arming of Balkans.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Feb. 19.—Real discouragement and some alarm is now being felt in France over French relations with Italy. During the last few months, and especially since the accession of Adolf Hitler to the chancellorship in Germany, incident has followed incident in a manner which indicates that, while Italy is a petitioner for concessions from France, she has no intention of wooing them. Overtures which have been made between them have all come from the French.

At Toulouse last October Edouard Herriot, then premier, held out the olive branch for better understanding but it was deliberately rejected by Rome.

Undiscouraged, Premier Paul-Boncour recently appointed Henry de Jouvenel as the French ambassador to Rome in the hope of making some real progress in cementing relations. That choice was dictated by many considerations.

Ambassador Snubbed.

In the first place, De Jouvenel is not unsympathetic either to Fascism or to Italy, and he could be counted on to hold his place with dignity.

But on De Jouvenel's first official visit, according to all accounts published here and not denied by Rome, Premier Mussolini deliberately snubbed him. There was talk of the ambassador wishing to return home immediately, but this was denied.

There followed immediately the Hirtenberg arms shipment affair. The alleged traffic in arms and airplanes between Italy and Hungary was coupled with the rumor of a new triple entente, or an understanding among Italy, Germany, and Hungary. Denials and protests have been made but have not quieted the suspicion that among the three dictatorial governments of central Europe there is a common working policy which is far from being imbued with the spirit of peace and understanding.

Claims French Menace Peace.

MILAN, Feb. 19.—(AP)—The assertion that the peace of Europe is being threatened was made today by Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, in summing up Fascist newspaper charges that France is arming her Balkan allies against Italy.

"The Balkan bloc must be considered a provocation," Il Popolo said, adding that new war clouds were collecting over the continent. La Stampa of Turin printed a list of armaments it said were furnished to Jugo-Slavia and Rumania in the last few years by France and asserted that the French controled armament factories in Czechoslovakia.

Turn Diplomatic Clock Back.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Great Britain and France have turned back the diplomatic clock 156 years in sending an interpellation to Austria regarding a shipment of arms from Italy, supposedly to Hungary via Austria.

This discovery was made by the Prague Tagblatt, a German language liberal journal, which consulted authorities on international law and found that assurances under oath—which were demanded in the Franco-British note to Austria on Feb. 11—disappeared in diplomatic usage along with the exchange of hostages.

Grace Moore, Opera Singer, Reports $81,500 Gem Theft

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Grace Moore, opera singer, notified police today that jewelry she estimated to be worth $81,500 had been stolen from her hotel room. Miss Moore, who in private life is Mrs. Valentine Parera, said she left the jewelry in a small trunk when she and her husband went for a swim today. She had placed the key to the trunk in a bureau drawer, she said. Police said two purses containing a sum of money, and jewelry belonging to Parera, were not taken.

Japan's war machine is expected to launch its assault on the Chinese province of Jehol this week. Arrows on map point to Kailu, northern gateway of Jehol province, and Shanhaikwan, Chinese city now held by Japanese forces. The Japanese forces are expected to invade the province at these two points. Another arrow points to Chinchow, Manchuria, through which city columns of Japanese troops and war materials are moving to the border. Jehol City, ancient summer capital of imperial China, is the main objective of the drive.

CHICAGO WOMAN ROBBED OF GEMS IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The theft of $12,000 in jewelry from the purse of Mrs. Sophia Jonas of Chicago while she and her husband, Dr. Samuel T. Jonas, a dentist, were in a movie house here was reported to police tonight. The Jonases live at the Flamingo hotel, 5520 South Shore drive, Chicago.

"While my husband and I watched the picture I kept my purse on a vacant seat next to me," she reported. "The jewelry was in a chamois zipper bag, and the bag was in the purse. Toward the close of the show my husband left the theater to get his car. Later, on leaving, I picked up my purse. It was open. The bag and jewels were gone."

Mrs. Jonas said she had carried her gems in the chamois bag on a recent trip around the world. The Jonases had spent three days at Waukesha and were driving home when they stopped for a rest at the movie house. The jewels, she said, consisted of two diamond rings, two brooches, a watch, and a string of pearls.

The complainant was Ernest Herndon, owner of the restaurant at 55 South La Salle street, Aurora, who has apparently left Aurora, according to State's Attorney Carbary.

WOMAN AND TWO MEN ARE KILLED IN N.Y. SPEAKEASY

New York, Feb. 20 [Monday].—[Special.]—Three persons, one of them a woman, 30, were slain without warning at 2:45 o'clock this morning while they were standing about the bar of a resort known as "Porky Murray's speakeasy" in West 52d street by gunmen who fired a fusillade of shots.

There were two gunmen, according to information obtained by the police from persons in the vicinity. How they entered the resort was not determined, since the front door was locked when the police arrived. A window opening on the rear was open, however, and it was believed that through this the murderers escaped.

The bodies of the woman and a man, who is believed to have been her escort, were found sprawled before the bar in the rear of a dining room on the ground floor. The body of a man, said to have been the bartender of the resort, was slumped behind the bar. None was immediately identified.

ACT TO PROTECT FOREIGN LIVES IN NORTH CHINA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20.—[Monday.]—Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian consul general, has been commissioned by the Peiping diplomatic corps to learn from the Japanese minister the intentions of Japan regarding the safety of foreigners in the Peiping-Tientsin district in the event of the outbreak of war in North China.

This information was published by Chinese newspapers today in an interview with Count Ciano, who is Premier Muossolini's son-in-law. Count Ciano has just returned to Shanghai from Peiping.

According to the newspaper reports, Ariyoshi, the Japanese minister, informed Count Ciano that the responsibility for the protection of foreigners rested upon Chinese authorities, "who have precipitated the present crisis through the dispatch of troops into Jehol province, thus making necessary Japanese military preparation for a conquest of the province."

Chinese papers yesterday published large advertisements of the so-called Shanghai Association for the Assistance of Chinese Volunteers in Manchuria. They are headed "To live or to die." They declared that "the Japanese are approaching, ready to open a drive into Jehol."

"Chinese military leaders are preparing to resist or die," the advertisement continued. "While they are defending China, can we sit and wait? We have already sent 400,000 silver dollars [about $88,000 in gold] to Jehol but more is needed. Come and help!"

sisting in fulfillment of the Japanese-Manchukuoan protocol.

[Manchukuo was set up several months ago with the assistance of Japanese in territory wrested from China. Japanese military leaders have contended their campaign is designed to assist Manchukuo in bringing order to the new state. Gen. Muto has denied that Japan desires Jehol for her personal use.]

The Mukden-Chinchow railway is choked with military traffic and troops are streaming through the city in long columns, moving toward the border under the cover of night. Whole trainloads of American motor trucks and motorcycles and other equipment have been seen at railroad stations, resembling those of wartime France. Tanks, airplanes, and artillery mortars are everywhere in evidence.

Japanese report there have been numerous defections among Chinese irregulars in Jehol and also allege Chinese soldiers are seizing all provisions and the peasants are threatened with famine.

Resist Invasion! China.

PEIPING, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Marshal Chang Hsuh-liang, North China military leader, today sent a telegram to the Chinese delegation at Geneva saying: "We have categorical orders from the central government to resist" [a threatened Japanese invasion of the Chinese province of Jehol].

The marshal returned today with T. V. Soong, finance minister of the Nationalist government, from an inspection trip to Jehol. Soong came from Nanking by plane a week ago to confer with Marshal Chang and others.

The message to the Chinese delegation at the league of nations said in part:

"Determination of the government and the people of China to resist the Japanese invasion has crystallized in a concentration of forces for that purpose. My visit to Chengtehfu [Jehol City], capitol of Jehol province, in company with T. V. Soong, was to complete plans to meet threatened and continued violations of Chinese sovereignty and territorial integrity by Japan.

"Japan has made the specious claims that she has invaded Manchuria to sustain treaty rights, but it lacks even that pretext for invading Jehol, as there are no treaties in connection with that province.

"We have categorical orders from the central government to resist the invasion and are ready to do our part. The people are determinedly behind us."

According to reliable reports from several sources, the Japanese now are moving troops into position for a drive on Chengtehfu from the direction of Kailu in the northeast, hoping to reach the objective by March 1, the anniversary of the proclamation of Manchukuo.

TOKIO'S "ABOUT FACE"

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Japanese diplomatic documents, brought to light in London today, prove that at the time of the Russo-Japanese war Japan insisted on keeping Manchuria "an integral part of China."

In the archives of the British foreign office has been found a Japanese note to Russia, dated Feb. 5, 1904, expounding the same arguments that China is using against Japan today. The note speaks of the "repeated refusal of the imperial Russian government to accept the obligation to respect the territorial integrity of China in Manchuria," and also declares that China's integrity "has been menaced by prolonged occupation of that province by Russia."

After Japan had broken diplomatic relations with Russia, the French minister to Tokio, Harmand, transmitted to Paris an explanation given him by Baron Komura, then Japanese foreign minister. Harmand's report, dated Feb. 8, 1904, is contained in Volume IV, Second Series, of "Documents Diplomatiques Francais," just published. One sentence of the report quotes Baron Komura as follows:

"Japan desires that Russia should recognize Manchuria as an integral part of China. Provided such a declaration is forthcoming, Japan is prepared to allow Russia complete liberty of action in that province."

HANGS SELF IN HOME.

Last night Sivada fired three bullets into his chest and killed himself. Following the divorce Mrs. Sivada gave her ex-husband until today to move from their home at 2651 Turner avenue. She left the home at 3 o'clock yesterday. When she returned five hours later she found him dead.

SNELL, IN GLASS HOUSE, THROWS ROCK AT FARLEY

Says Those Who Pay Debt of Democrats Get Jobs.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Representative Snell of New York, who lives in one of the biggest glass houses in Washington, has thrown a rock at Mr. Jim Farley, the chairman of the Democratic national committee, who is trying to pay off the Democratic party's debt of $750,000 before inauguration day.

BERTRAND H. SNELL.

Mr. Snell says this is an open-and-shut case of something sinister and infers that those who contribute most to the payment of the Democratic debt are going to get the jobs. Mr. Snell must be looking for trouble because Mr. Farley used to be a bush league ball player and the country which he comes from up on the west shore of the Hudson river produces some of the best throwing size rocks on the American continent, especially suitable for busting in glass houses.

Farley Can Heave Rocks.

With his old baseball experience, Mr. Farley can heave rocks with experts, but it would not take especially good control to bust in Mr. Snell's glass house. Mr. Snell's glass house would be hard to miss, being so big and famous and conspicuous, and it looks as though in a finish battle Mr. Snell might wind up very sorry indeed that he cast the first rock.

It was just unfortunate all around that Mr. Snell brought the matter up in such an insinuating way, because if this is not stopped by amicable means both houses may have to be replaced.

Mr. Snell, as an old party man, thoroughly experienced in party politics and with no illusions regarding patronage, undoubtedly spoke from experience when he inferred that those who contribute the most will get the best jobs. Who else does he suppose would get the best jobs and why else does he suppose they would make the biggest contributions? In such matters, you get the job you pay for and if you are young and rising and socially active, your contribution may get you a job as assistant secretary of the navy or even a place in the cabinet, and it seems a little prudish of an old party leader to place sinister interpretation on an old established custom of the country.

Rich Enough to Pay for Privilege.

If you are not quite so young and rising, but rich enough to pay for the privilege of holding a job and your wife and daughters like to be kissed on the hand by parties wearing deep tangled horse mane whiskers, your contribution may buy you a job as ambassador somewhere with the right to pull superior snoots at American tourists passing through. In that case, of course, your pay is nominal and you may shoot the works giving one dinner by way of occasion for some intensive hand kissing under championship conditions.

There is a distinct type of American big shot whose wife and daughters care for this sort of thing, although the same effect undoubtedly could be obtained at negligible expense, at home by chafing the back of the hand slightly with a moistened bath brush. Moreover, the bath brush would not be likely to leave a deposit of macaroni or sole marguery among other miscellany. However, there are no imaginable conditions at home under which it would be possible to rise so superior to other American citizens as in some European embassy or ministry where inexperienced Americans pop in expecting to put their feet up and talk about what dirty robbers the European hotel keepers are and instead find themselves invited to state their business to a European clerk or an Oxford American and be as brief as possible about it.

No Particular Business.

Very often the Americans discover that they have no particular business, but merely wished to pull up a chair and sit a while and are too taken back to realize how different the embassies are from what they supposed they would be until they are half way down the block.

Such ambassadors may run into big expense to the government in the long run because they have been found susceptible to crushes on the countries to which they are accredited and find it difficult to hold out for an even break for the U. S. A., much less the best of it. But when you get your ambassador for virtually nothing, that is the kind of ambassador you get. In the course of a year or two some of them find themselves thinking of Americans as those impossible Americans and apologizing to the local foreign minister for the uncouth attitude of the American government.

The worst crushes occur in London, but some pretty high fevers have been scored in other capitals by retired magnates who equipped themselves for diplomacy by writing contributions to just such party funds as Mr. Farley was trying to raise when he heard that crash and looked up to yell, "Who threw that rock into my glass house?"

Farley Is Patient Man.

However, Mr. Farley is a patient man with a high respect for fine old American traditions, and he probably will overlook that one rock of Mr. Snell's rather than meet him rock-for-rock in a general exchange which could only have the effect of destroying one of the most beautiful illusions of the citizens. The citizens are a believing lot and they believe that contributions to the party funds are always made in a spirit of the purest patriotism and altruism, being unable to associate cash donations with subsequent tariff schedules or income tax rebates of considerably larger size than the contributions themselves. And they positively never have thought that a statesman's or diplomat's fitness for office dawned on the administration of which he was a part simultaneously with and not a moment before his check had been received and compared with the size of other checks received for the same fund.

There is so much unrest, worry and disillusionment going on at the present time that Mr. Farley, big and generous as he is, may decide just to stick a new window in his glass house where Mr. Snell's rock went through and trust Mr. Snell to regain his composure and desist. Because if he does not desist and Mr. Farley is compelled to take steps, Mr. Snell will be just as sorry as himself.

SENATE INQUIRY COUNSEL LASHES 'KINGFISH' LONG

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Louisiana's political turmoil echoed in the capital today, with counsel for the senate committee investigating the state's 1932 Democratic primary issuing a statement assailing Senator Huey P. Long and members disclaiming responsibility for it.

The inquiry, conducted by a subcommittee of the special committee on campaign expenditures, revolved around the defeat in the Democratic primary of Senator Edwin S. Broussard by Representative John H. Overton, the latter backed by Long.

Broussard charges vote buying and other graft.

Urge Inquiry Be Pressed.

Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, retired, the counsel, in a formal statement to the press just after his return today from New Orleans, where the committee has been holding hearings for two weeks, insisted the investigation be continued.

Ansell made it clear in giving out the statement he was acting on his own responsibility. Senators Howell [Rep., Neb.] and Carey [Rep., Wyo.], who conducted the hearings, promptly got together when they heard of Ansell's statement and over their signatures had this to say:

"The subcommittee [which they composed] will report at an early date to the full committee, which will subsequently report to the senate.

"Other than this, the committee has not or will not authorize any report or statement."

Long, self-styled "kingfish" and political dictator of the state, kept silent in this outpourst, but indicated that he possibly would take official notice on the senate floor tomorrow of the inquiry and of the counsel's remarks.

Charge and counter-charge flew thick and fast in New Orleans at the hearings, with Long, acting as counsel for Overton, clashing repeatedly with Ansell. Ansell said this in his statement which sharply assailed Long and Overton:

"If this investigation is to be thoroughly done it is not yet half finished. If any senate investigation ever needed to be pushed aggressively to the end this is such an investigation."

Ends Work as Counsel.

He has concluded his work as committee counsel under the agreement in which he was retained, Ansell explained, when newspapermen asked him if it were not unusual for a committee employé to issue such a statement.

"That is the way I feel about the matter," he said.

He added he had been retained for 30 days and that period was up. Howell told newspapermen there was no disagreement between the counsel and members.

Whether the inquiry should be continued will be put up to the full committee by the subcommittee. Howell has expressed himself publicly as favoring continuation of the investigation.

LOWDEN, WALLACE JOIN IN PLEA FOR WAR DEBT REVISION

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—A joint statement signed by Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and Henry A. Wallace, Iowa publisher, urging reconsideration of intergovernmental debts, was made public here today by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of the General Motors corporation and chairman of the committee for the consideration of inter-governmental debts.

The statement declared that export markets are of vital importance to many of the country's basic industries, including the production of cotton, wheat, and copper, and urged debt revision as one means of bringing about a trend toward better times.

Payment by the European debtor nations is at present extremely difficult if not impossible, the statement continued. A recent economic study has shown that an increase in the annual national income of one per cent would more than compensate for the loss of all payments to the United States on the present annual basis the statement declared. Should our import trade be increased to the level of three years ago, the additional revenue from customs duties would amount to 300 million dollars a year, or more than enough to compensate the treasury for any loss of payments, the two signers of the statement argued.

MOVE TO ENACT LAW ON STATES' REPEAL ACTION

Wets Claim Margin of 20 Votes in House.

James M. Beck, noted authority on the constitution, and many other wets, hold that the Palmer plan is unconstitutional. There are those, too, who fear that legislation prescribing in detail how the states shall call and constitute their conventions, if not also placing the election of convention delegates under federal supervision, would arouse the antipathies of the southern states, the votes of some of which will be essential to removal of the eighteenth amendment from the constitution. It is not doubted that the enactment of such legislation would revive the cry of "force bill" with which the south invariably greets any proposal of federal interference in elections.

Two alternative proposals are under consideration. One is that congress prescribe that delegates to each convention be elected in the manner that presidential electors are chosen. Under this plan the advocates of repeal in each state would select by convention or otherwise a panel of repeal delegates. In similar manner the drys would select a panel of anti-repeal delegates. The number in each case would be the number of presidential electors to which the state was entitled at the last presidential election.

Similar to Electoral College.

The state would then elect the delegates by popular vote as in a presidential election. The delegates receiving the larger number of votes would be elected. In nearly all cases a solid repeal or anti-repeal set of delegates would be elected. It would then only remain for the delegates to meet in duly constituted convention and cast their votes for or against repeal, just as the presidential electors meet in the electoral college and record the popular vote for President.

Simplicity, it is urged, is the cardinal virtue of this plan. Complexities pertaining to the constitutionality of the convention would be eliminated. The machinery for holding presidential elections could be employed in every state. The holding of the convention would entail no expenditure of time and money. It would merely record the popular will.

Plan Opposed by Wets.

The other suggestion is that congress prescribe conventions to be composed of one delegate from each state senatorial district, to be chosen in the manner of the election of state senators. A good many wets object to this plan on the ground that state legislatures, as at present constituted, invariably give greater representation to the dry rural than to the wet urban communities. One of the principal reasons for prescribing ratification of this amendment by conventions was the desire to avoid disfranchisement of any element of the electorate.

RAYMOND ROBINS, DRY, FINALLY ENDS TRIP TO SEE HOOVER

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Raymond Robins, prohibition advocate, who threw the nation into an uproar when he disappeared several months ago while en route to visit President Hoover, today finally completed his trip to the White House.

With Mrs. Robins accompanying him, the long absent prohibitionist reached the executive mansion while the chief executive and Mrs. Hoover were attending church. The Robins had lunch and supper with the Hoovers and were invited to spend the night.

Probably by coincidence, the Robins' call upon the first family came upon the eve of action by the house upon a resolution to submit prohibition repeal to the states, a vote which observers forecast will take the question out of congress and to the states.

No announcement was made at the White House of the visit by Robins and his wife, and newspapermen were not given opportunity during the first part of their visit for an interview.

Robins has been resting for more than two months in his home at Brooksville, Fla., denying himself to casual visitors and the public.

WISCONSIN MILK PICKETS NOISY, BUT NO VIOLENCE

Governor Denies Plan to Call Guards.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—More than 500 pickets, their friends and onlookers gathered today around the Borden company condensary at New London as the largest demonstrative move of the milk strike which began last Wednesday.

The crowd was somewhat noisy and ignored the request of Mayor E. W. Wendlandt and Police Chief Harry D. Macklin of New London to disperse. There was no violence, however. The pickets broke up their formation some time later after guards and employes of the dairy company threatened to turn steam hose upon them.

Denies Report of Troops.

Thus far the mil' strike has been remarkably free from disorder, although during the day a number of milk trucks were stopped by pickets en route to dairies and their milk supplies spilled on the highways. These incidents and the demonstration at New London gave rise to reports that Gov. A. G. Schmedeman was considering calling out the Wisconsin National Guard. The governor flatly denied any thought of turning out the militia. The milk strike has been quite orderly, he said.

Observers said the picketing of the Borden plant at New London was the most spectacular gesture thus far of the strikers. How many bona fide pickets were on the scene was not determined. It was learned, though, that many of the onlookers were town idle receiving public aid.

"This is not your affair," warned Mayor Wendlandt, singling these men out. "It is not a city affair. Go home."

Ordered to Move.

The mayor ordered the pickets to move beyond the city limits, into county territory where they are legally permitted to picket. While pickets were on the job little milk reached the condensary. After their withdrawal a steady supply arrived.

Pickets have established camps on many roads, keeping an all night vigil. Scores of tents at these camps added a military touch. Walter M. Singler, president of the milk pool, which is sponsoring the strike, appeared optimistic. The men are enthusiastic, he said. He predicted it would spread, probably affecting the Milwaukee and Chicago markets. Singler will go to Appleton tomorrow morning and to Madison in the afternoon for conferences.

In some sections, many dairymen voiced opposition to the strike. A massmeeting of these will be held tomorrow night at Clintonville.

BOETTCHER GETS MESSAGES FROM SON'S KIDNAPERS

Notes in Handwriting of Denver Broker.

BULLETIN.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Claude K. Boettcher, father of Charles Boettcher II., kidnaped Denver broker, said tonight he had received communications which he was satisfied were from the captors of his son. They contained notes, he said, which were undoubtedly penned by him.

They were answered immediately, but Boettcher fears the answer has gone astray.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Police probed today into Denver's gangland as investigation was carried on into the murder of Joe Roma, gang leader, and into the kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II., wealthy investment broker.

Officials linked the gangland killing of Roma with the abduction of Boettcher because of Roma's activity in that case. They believe underworld associates of the dead liquor ring leader killed him to stop his activities in the Boettcher case. For three days Roma had been secretly carrying on his own inquiry into the Boettcher kidnaping. Saturday a few hours before he was to confer with Chief of Police Albert M. Clark he was killed. Fourteen revolver wounds were found in his head and body.

Four Held in Each Case.

Meanwhile, police held four suspects in the kidnaping of young Boettcher and four in the death of Roma. The four men held in the kidnaping case are Frank Mortellaro of Denver, suspected by Chief of Police Clark of being an actual member of the kidnaping gang; J. F. Rotitto of Denver, R. M. Eskew and Charles McFetridge both of Greeley, Colo.

The men held in the murder inquiry are all members of north Denver liquor rings. One, Louis Brindisi, was a bodyguard for Roma. The others are James Spinelli and Eugene and Clyde Smaldone.

Police questioned them throughout the day without result. They admitted they had conferred with Roma a few hours before his death, saying they left him practicing on his mandolin.

Expect Word in Few Days.

Members of the Boettcher family today said they believed the kidnapers of Boettcher—who is held for $60,000 ransom — were remaining silent until after the police search has died down. They expressed the opinion that word would be received within the next few days. A score of note.. have come to the palatial Boettcher home in the last week but all have been discarded as from cranks.

Chief Clark returned from the home of Claude K. Boettcher, father of the abducted man, tonight and said Boettcher's wife could not identify pictures of two of the men held as suspects. He said they would not be released, however.

FOUND DEAD ON RAILWAY TRACK.

Alphonso Renda, 49 years old, 287 East 70th street, Chicago Heights, was found dead last night on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad right of way a few blocks from his home. Police believe he was struck by a train.

CONFER ON PLAN TO REOPEN BANKS IN MICHIGAN

Hoover Keeps in Touch by Telephone.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Directors of Detroit banks were in conference today almost continually until well into the evening discussing plans for the resumption of business by all banks in the state, closed a week ago by Gov. Comstock's moratorium proclamation. Substantial progress, it was authoritatively announced, was made towards terminating the holiday.

Executives of both the main groups of Detroit banks are working on a plan, that if agreed to, will reopen the banks at the expiration of the moratorium, which would be not later than Thursday morning, Wednesday being an official holiday.

R. F. C. Represented.

A. A. Ballantine, representing the Reconstruction Finance corporation, is still in the city, and took part in today's conferences along with representatives of the federal reserve system. President Hoover was also in telephone communication with local bankers.

Bank lawyers were whipping into shape the bills which will be presented to the state legislature tomorrow evening, one of which will make legal the governor's proclamation which closed more than 500 banks in the state for a period of eight days. One bill would empower the state banking commissioner with authority to limit withdrawals of cash from banks at the expiration of the holiday, while still another would give the governor extraordinary power to meet any financial emergency.

Ask Extension of Holiday.

The Bankers association of Michigan has petitioned the governor for an extension of the holiday period, but on this request Gov. Comstock has made no comment. He announced, however, that before opening time next Thursday, legislation will be enacted.

Grand Rapids bankers who attended today's meetings, decided to open their doors tomorrow morning for the purpose of cashing out-state checks, and for the purpose of making change, but no other business will be transacted.

Burglars yesterday looted the home of Louis Rosengard, 1516 South Turner avenue, an employé of the United Mercantile Distributing company, 649 West Roosevelt road, taking jewelry, clothing and other articles valued at about $3,000. The burglary was discovered by Rosengard and his wife, Violet, when they returned home in the evening after visiting relatives.

SCRIP TO BE ISSUED AMONG THE FARMERS IN DEWITT COUNTY

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 19—[Special.]—Business and professional men of Clinton, Ill., announced today a plan by which scrip will be placed in circulation among the farmers of that vicinity to be redeemed in payment for merchandise or services.

The plan for the first week calls for the issue of 4,000 certificates at a face value of $1 each. Each certificate will have space for indorsements the same as a check and when so indorsed by 50 persons of business houses will be redeemed in cash by the issuing body.

First circulation will be accomplished by the purchase of corn from Dewitt county farmers at a premium of 5 cents a bushel above the market price. Each of 42 merchants has subscribed $10 in cash to a fund with which to start the plan. The $420 thus obtained will permit the purchase of 8,400 bushels of corn on a basis of 5 cents premium on each bushel.

The certificates are to be exchanged for merchandise, payment of old accounts or for professional services.

WOMAN CLAIMS PART OF ARISTIDE BRIAND'S ESTATE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 19.—Is a woman who consorts with a great statesman, without benefit of clergy, entitled to a share of his estate after he is dead? This question, which a French court will have to decide soon, is one which has stirred much popular curiosity, for the dead statesman is none other than Aristide Briand himself.

A suit was filed yesterday in behalf of Mme. Jeanne Cornelie Nouteau, former wife of a Saint Nazaire banker, who left her husband in 1891. She wants $6,000 or an annuity of $780 awarded from the estate on the grounds that she should have been mentioned in Briand's will but was not.

The French public is not shocked to learn that there was a hidden romance in the life of their great statesman, but it is intrigued at the point of law raised. Technically Mme. Nouteau appears to have no more claim under French law on Briand's estate than in any other country, but her lawyer, Maurice Garcon, holds that since Briand continued to support Mme. Nouteau even after their more intimate friendship was ended, it is shown that he intended to provide for her future as she asserts. Secondly, he declares that Briand at all times showed gratitude to Mme. Nouteau for never making any trouble for him even after he ceased to see her regularly.

CO-EDS ESCAPE BURNING HOUSE IN NIGHT ATTIRE

Sorority House Destroyed; Money Box Lost.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Eleven University of Michigan co-eds escaped from the burning Alpha Delta Gamma sorority house shortly before daylight today. Most of the eleven escaped only in negligee and lost all or most of their personal belongings. Two were forced to go barefoot. Those in the rear of the house left by the fire escape, a steel ladder.

The girls were aroused by their chaperon, Miss Agnes Barker, after she was awakened by the "furnace rumbling."

Sheltered in Dean's House.

The girls first found shelter at the home of Dr. G. Carl Huber, dean of the graduate school, which is next door. Later they borrowed overcoats, shoes, and galoshes from members of the Delta Upsilon fraternity across the street and ran to the chapter house of Phi Sigma Sigma sorority. They were offered rooms at the Mosher-Jordan dormitory, where they will probably remain pending arrangement for purchase of a new house.

The house was wrecked by fire and water and insurance of $10,000 on the building and $5,000 on the furnishings will barely cover the loss. The value of the personal property of the girls, most of which was lost, is estimated at about $1,000 for each girl.

Their Cash Disappears.

A money box, containing $65 cash on which the house was operating during the state banking holiday, disappeared after Miss Ellen Kean, the treasurer, threw it from a second story window. Miss Kean reached the spot a minute afterwards, having gone down the fire escape, but the box was missing.

Miss Rita McOmber, Peoria, Ill., is house president, and Miss Kathryn Kirn, Morgan Park, Chicago, a member.

NAVY WAR GAME GIVES DEFINITE PROOF OF NEEDS

Must Be Met if Fleet Is Kept Strong.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The recent war game between the "Black" and "Blue" forces of the United States fleet did not reveal any startling weaknesses in the navy nor did it emphasize the fleet's strength. It did not prove that the Pacific coast was either invulnerable to attack or defenseless from attack. It was one "war" which neither side won—officially.

But it was not a negative test of sea power: its results have positive value, and as such will be of importance when the next President and his advisers discuss the needs of the navy after March 4.

If the war game proved anything it did prove that the navy has certain definite needs, needs which must be met if the fleet is not to be weakened. One high ranking officer, while praising the morale of the personnel and the efficiency of operation of the fleet, went so far as to say that the United States navy is now a "poor third, if not a fourth" in strength among the sea powers of the world.

Unprepared if War Came.

A certain section of naval opinion is fast reaching the point where, unless something is done to increase the fleet strength, it will decline responsibility for what may happen in a possible future war.

Out of the recent battle problem, the battleship, comparatively slow but able to take as well as give smashing blows, emerged with its reputation as the "backbone of the fleet" enhanced rather than diminished.

American naval officers, unlike those of many other nations, still hold that the battleship is of primary importance in naval war, and that possession of an adequate number of such ships is the first step toward adequate sea power.

The recent war game, rather than weakening that belief, strengthened it, for it was the big guns of the battleships—the Texas and the Oklahoma in one case, and the Pennsylvania in the other—that pounded to pieces the hopes of "enemy" success.

More Speed Needed.

There is a growing school of thought, however, which believes that the battleship of the future must have more speed, and there are others who say that our navy is beginning to feel badly the lack of battle cruisers. A fast ship, capable of keeping up with the carriers, and yet heavily gunned enough to beat down surface resistance, is needed for use with far flung carrier raiding operations; a battle cruiser or a battleship faster by several knots than any we have today would fill the bill.

ORPHAN SISTERS ARE REUNITED AFTER 14 YEARS

They Seek Two Others in Milwaukee.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Two of four sisters separated in early childhood were reunited today. They had grown to young womanhood in the 14 years since the family was broken up by the death of their father, and although both lived in or near Milwaukee, they had had no knowledge of each or of the two other sisters for whom they now are seeking.

The sisters united are Mrs. Marie Kaszewski, 1951 South 11th street, Milwaukee, married and with a 6 year old daughter, and Helen Wetzel, 823 Armour avenue, Cudahy, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wetzel. They were daughters of Martha and Ann Dziados, whose family was broken about 14 years ago by the death of the husband and father. There were four daughters, Marie, the oldest, aged about 9 years; a son, John, and daughters, Martha, Ann, and Helen.

Stunned with the task of supporting five infants and herself, the mother lost her health and since has needed constant institutional care. The children were taken to the Wauwatosa County Home for Children and in the course of a year or so all were adopted.

The boy, John, only knew the name and address of the oldest sister, and between them there always has been contact. When he joined the navy of the United States a year ago he gave her name as his next of kin. Through that and the help of the Milwaukee police department Helen Wetzel learned the whereabouts of her oldest sister. Helen appealed to the Cudahy police and was by them directed to Milwaukee. The brother's name was on record as a recruit in the navy, and through that the older sister was found.

Mrs. Kaszewski is employed at the fountain at the Boston store, and her sister, Helen, approached her there and identified herself. The sisters now will begin a united effort to locate their two other sisters.

Dr. Jefferson Speaks

The Chicago Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, last night celebrated the 25th anniversary of its founding by Clifford W. Barnes. Congratulations to the club which had been received from notable persons in civic and religious affairs throughout the country were read by Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western railroad, acting as chairman of the club in the absence of Mr. Barnes, who is recovering from a serious illness.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson of New York delivered the anniversary sermon. Dr. Louis L. Mann, spiritual leader of Sinai temple, spoke of the club's contribution to the better life of the city and of its value throughout the country through its radio broadcasts.

AUTO CRASHES INTO VIADUCT PILLAR; 2 HURT

Max Kornhauser, 42 years old, and his wife, Annette, 36, of the Chateau hotel, 3838 Broadway, were injured and several other persons were bruised this morning when their automobile crashed into the substructure of the Illinois Central railroad at 16th street and Michigan avenue. The car was wrecked. Charles Nathan, 60 years old, 215 East Chestnut street, the driver, was only slightly hurt.

An unidentified man, believed to be John Kaczar, 50 years old, houseman at the Kenwood hotel, 4100 Kenwood avenue, was killed last night by an automobile which did not stop. The accident occurred in Milwaukee avenue at Ashland avenue.

This death increased the motor toll in Cook county since Jan. 1 to 104.

Mrs. Anita Johnson, 29 years old, 218 Whiting street, was critically injured last night by an automobile in front of 1040 North La Salle street.

NAVY TO LAUNCH ITS FIRST REAL PLANE CARRIER

Mrs. Hoover to Christen Vessel Saturday.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The navy will acquire its first vessel designed and built as an airplane carrier when the Ranger takes the water at Newport News, Va., next Saturday. Mrs. Hoover will christen the new carrier in honor of the ship of the same name commanded by John Paul Jones, the navy department announced today.

Previous airplane carriers, which are the Lexington, the Saratoga, and the Langley, were designed for other uses and converted to airplane carriers. The Ranger is the navy's first attempt at constructing a ship of this type and differences of opinion have already arisen.

Differ on Type of Deck.

The authorized design intended the carrier to be of the "flush deck" type, but the navy is now trying to get a bill passed through congress to authorize a change in the plans to construct the Ranger with an "island deck." In the first type of construction no superstructure is provided except a smokestack which swings out of the way so that the entire deck is available for taking off and landing.

The "island deck" type has a superstructure at the extreme side of the vessel, leaving practically the entire deck free for the use of the airplanes. This type, the navy now believes, has proved more practicable than the "flush deck," it has been found, officers said today, that the superstructure, which provides space for the navigation and gunnery officers of the vessel, with increased visibility and efficiency for them, does not create air currents detrimental to the takeoff and landings of the airplanes. This was the objection originally raised against this type of construction.

Change Would Cost 2 Million.

The change, if authorized by congress, would entail an extra expenditure of $2,000,000 over the $19,000,000 originally authorized to be expended on the Ranger. Construction of the ship was started in November, 1930, and is expected to be completed by May 1, 1934. It will displace 13,800 tons, will be capable of a speed of 30 knots an hour, will be 765 feet long, with a draft of 20½ feet and a beam of 90 feet.

The new airplane carrier will be the sixth ship named Ranger to be a part of the United States navy. The fifth was a battle cruiser which was scrapped under the terms of the Washington naval treaty.

The Portland, a "treaty cruiser" of 10,000 tons, will be placed in commission at the Boston navy yard next Thursday. It will be under command of Capt. Herbert Leary.

DETECTIVE ACES PUT ON TRAIL OF HOTEL KILLERS

Aroused by the murder early yesterday of a Negro doorman by three bandits in the lobby of the Whitehall apartment hotel, 105 East Delaware place, Chief of Detectives Schoemaker last night assigned a picked squad to track down the robber gang, believed to be the same which has committed a series of hotel lobby robberies recently on the near north side.

The victim of yesterday's holdup was Le Roy Selby, 45 years old, an ex-soldier. He was shot by one of the bandits when he reached for his gun. In spite of the critical wound, Selby followed the bandits to the street and fired five shots at them. He died a few minutes later while being taken to Passavant hospital.

FRANK PARISH IN FLIGHT FROM TRIAL, U. S. TOLD

"Boy Wizard" Writes He Is "Voluntary Exile."

he had defied members of the "group," the so-called rulers, he said, of the United States. He consequently found himself subjected to "legalized lynching," he wrote. His first battle, he said, was with Henry L. Doherty, whose company tried to restrict the Parish enterprise. The letters go on into an extended defense of his enterprises and condemnation of his foes. Toward the end he describes his indictment and the insistance of Mr. Struett for an early trial.

4 Named in Indictments.

Parish was indicted last March. Named with him were S. J. Maddin of Kansas City, Ralph G. Grandall of Chicago, and James F. McManmon, also of Chicago. The indictment closed an investigation of two years into the operations of the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company.

More than 120 witnesses were questioned by federal agents, and many of these testified before the grand jury. It was charged that Frank P. Parish & Co. has sold stock in the holding company to 20,000 investors for as high as $50 a share. The stock is worth less than a dollar now.

Parish was one of the organizers of the company in 1928. His activities in that organization followed a varied but affluent career which really began in his boyhood. Only two years before Parish had gone into voluntary bankruptcy. The company sold stock lavishly, it was charged, and when the crash came it was found that $35,000,000 had been wiped out.

Lacks Money for Fees.

After his indictment Parish came to Chicago. He was first represented by the law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw. They withdrew early this month and Attorney Warrick, a friend of Parish, was engaged. Parish wrote that he had been unable to meet the fees asked by his original attorneys.

It was for the purpose of raising a defense fund that Parish went to New York, according to Attorney Warrick. Parish thought that he had two places in New York where he could find the funds, Mr. Warrick said.

A Promotional Romance.

The career of Parish is a romantic chapter in promotion and finance. At 15 years of age he started out selling marine wares in Chicago. The market was good, and he expanded his business. Then he stepped into the oil business. That returned wealth. At 18 he "had his million." He was made president of several pipe line companies. Once or twice he had reverses, but he overcame them.

In 1929 he steamed into the Chicago harbor in the Theo, a 150 foot seagoing yacht. On deck he sat with his wife and children. He modestly refused to discuss his success. But the yacht stood as concrete evidence of it. He cruised for several weeks in the yacht, then returned to his headquarters at Kansas City. A year or so ago he purchased the Mayflower, former presidential yacht, for a reported $16,105.

It was recalled last night that sentences of 20 years in prison and fines of $15,000 each were imposed recently on Henry F. Norcott, Harold D. Bennett, Charles P. Packer Jr., W. Scott Carroll, and Leslie A. Needham, officials of the defunct H. O. Stone company, for using the mails to defraud. These sentences were the heaviest ever imposed in mail fraud cases. The maximum penalty in mail fraud cases is five years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine on each count.

Recall Great Fire

Mrs. John R. Hayes and Mrs. John McDonough, twin sisters, celebrated their 76th birthday yesterday at the home of Mrs. Hayes' eldest son, John, at 1133 Pratt boulevard. Forty-five members of their families helped the sisters observe the anniversary. Both are well and active. They recall vividly their experiences on the night of the Chicago fire in 1871. Mrs. McDonough's husband later became chief of the fire department in the administration of Mayor Dunne. Frank Mahoney of New York, a brother of the twins and the only other living member of their immediate family, made a surprise visit to Chicago to attend the family reunion.

AIRPLANE RACE AROUND WORLD IS IN PROSPECT

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—A high speed race around the world is in the making in two hangars at Floyd Bennett field. Wiley Post, who, with Harold Gatty as navigator, flew around the world in eight days two years ago, is grooming the Winnie Mae for an attempt to break his own record. It is reported that Post plans to go alone, assisted by an automatic pilot, which would give him time to chart his course. Post would not discuss the report.

The other expedition is that of James Mattern and Bennett Griffin, who made a fast flight between New York and Berlin only to crash in Russia later when they were more than ten hours ahead of the Post and Gatty schedule.

Their plane is ready. They are flying a machine exactly like the Winnie Mae, a Lockheed-Vega monoplane, equipped with a 500 horse power Wasp motor. Both machines can cruise at three miles a minute and the flyers are confident that they can cut hours, if not a full day, from the record of 8 days 15 hours and 51 minutes.

Some time next week Mattern and Griffin will make a long test flight from Floyd Bennett field to either Dallas or Fort Worth in a little more than half a day if possible. Arrangements have already been made for refueling their plane at Harbor Grace and in Europe and Asia, and the diplomatic difficulties are being ironed out now.

LAWYER URGES NOMINATION OF JUDGES BY BAR

Says Legislature Can Change Law.

Nomination of candidates for the bench by the bar associations of the state's judicial districts was proposed yesterday by Attorney Charles M. Haft in a letter to the Chicago Bar association. He asserted that the reform can be accomplished by legislative enactments without amendment of the constitution.

Attorney Haft advanced his proposal as a means of raising the standard of men on the bench. Members of a bar of each district, he said, are more conversant with the legal ability, judicial temperament and integrity of prospective condidates for the bench than the politicians of the district and a lawyer is certainly more interested in the learning, temperament and integrity of the judiciary than a politician.

"Extended study fails to reveal any constitutional provision relative to nominations for any judicial office, therefore, under the familiar principle that the legislature is possessed of all power of which it is not shorn by the constitution, I conclude that the legislature is free to adopt any method for the selection of judicial candidates," Attorney Haft wrote.

"However these candidates are selected, all voters must have an equal opportunity to express their choice at elections. It is further observed that there is no constitutional provision requiring that a primary election be had as a means of selecting candidates for any office, judicial or other.

"I believe it may be well said that if the right to nominate judicial candidates is vested in the bar that right should not be given to the bar as electors but rather by virtue of their being officers of the court. In such case it may be said that no elector is deprived of any right. The procedure whereby judicial candidates would be selected by the bar would not be, in any sense, a primary election."

CANDIDATE FOR COUNCIL RAISES HIGH TAX ISSUE

Shows How Government Takes Earnings.

The cost of government has been raised and an issue in the 7th ward aldermanic campaign by Edward J. Hess, behind whose candidacy the various Republican factions in the ward have united.

In his meetings, Hess, a former assistant United States district attorney, cites the following facts as illustrative of the direction in which the governmental costs are drifting:

"In 1913, the tax bill of Cook county was slightly over $57,000,000. In 1930, it had risen to the appalling sum of $290,000,000, an increase of over 400%.

"The appropriation for operating the Municipal court in 1913 was $866,000, and in 1932, the appropriation for the same court, with an increase of but six judges, sore to $2,400,000, an increase of nearly 180 per cent.

"It has been accurately estimated that while in 1913 the cost of all government was 9 per cent of the national income, in 1931 it had risen to 27 per cent, so that in 1931 every earning person contributed 27 per cent of his income to be governed, an amount way out of proportion for the service received, or the necessities of the law abiding citizenry. It is also estimated that the cost of all government in 1931 was $14,000,000,000."

Hess has nine opponents for the seat vacated by Ald. Barnet Hodes, the leading one being Thomas J. Daley, formerly cashier in the Calumet National bank and the choice of the Democratic ward organization. The other candidates are Dr. Aurelius T. Siemianowski, Arch T. Bray, Harry Simon, Bernard Yedor, John J. Maypole, Raymond I. Purcell, and George W. Gill.

A contest of considerable intensity is underway also in the 5th ward where James J. Cusack Jr., former University of Chicago athlete and now an assistant state's attorney, aspires to replace Ald. Irving J. Schreiber. Cusack has the indorsement of the Democratic organization, and Schreiber that of the Republicans.

IN CRAZY QUILT OF TAXES, HERE'S CRAZIEST PATCH

Nonhigh School District a Strange Creature.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

In the political and geographical crazy quilt formed by the 425 taxing districts of Cook county, tax experts regard the one called the non-high school district as perhaps the craziest patch of all.

The district was organized under an act of legislature in 1917 for the purpose of raising revenue to pay for the high school education of children living outside organized high school districts. It has grown Topsy-like and its three elective trustees are now drafting legislation proposed to cure some of the abuses which have impaired the solvency of the district and placed inequitable burdens on taxpayers in some of its parts.

Exist in Most Counties.

There are non-high school districts in most of the counties of Illinois. In Cook county the district embraces all territory outside organized high school districts, consisting of all or part of eighteen rural townships. The trustees of the district levy a tax at a uniform rate, 46 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation, in the 1931 tax levies, on the whole district. From the fund thus raised, they pay to various high schools the tuition of students from the non-high school district.

In 1917, the first year of its organization, the district had a tax levy of $20,000, from which it paid the tuition of about 50 pupils. In 1927 the district paid tuition for 1,021 pupils, and had a levy of $175,000. Last year there were 2,402 pupils, and a 1932 tax levy of $450,000 has been voted.

Unable to Pay Bills.

In spite of rapidly mounting levies, non-collection of taxes has made it impossible for the board to meet the tuition bills rendered by the high schools. It is still paying bills for the school year ending in June, 1931, and one high school board, that of Thornton township, has notified the non-high school board that unless its tuition bills are paid up, that school will refuse admittance to non-high school district pupils in September.

The 1931 tax rate of 46 cents in the non-high school districts is only a half to a quarter of the rates of the regular suburban high school districts. One reason for this comparatively low rate, which, however, is expected to raise a levy of $375,000 in the current collection, is that high schools to which students from the non-high school districts go cannot bill that district for any building costs.

Only Tuition Costs.

The high school districts may put into their tuition bills only the actual cost of the instruction of the outside students. This is one reason why communities in the nonhigh school district, even after their population has grown to the point where they might operate a high school of their own, are frequently reluctant to do so. If they start their own high school they have to pay building as well as instructional costs.

The inequities of the situation do not fall alone on the organized high school districts, however. County Superintendent of Schools E. J. Tobin, ex officio secretary of the nonhigh school board, pointed out yesterday how the system works to the disadvantage of taxpayers in districts having few high school students.

He cited as an example a recent case in Schaumburg township. The farmers of that township found that they were paying nonhigh school taxes totaling $10,000 in the township, although the township was sending only one pupil, the daughter of a minister, to high school.

Try to Avoid Payment.

"A group of these farmer taxpayers," said Mr. Tobin, "went to the minister and said to him, 'If you will take your daughter out of the high school, so that we won't have to pay that $10,000 tax bill, we'll pay her tuition to the best finishing school you can find.' The minister was willing to agree, but then the farmers found out that even if the township sent no pupils to high school they would still have to pay the nonhigh school tax."

Incidentally, those Schaumburg township residents cling to the somewhat old fashioned habit of paying their taxes. Recently Mrs. Robert T. Echols of the Flossmoor League of Women Voters made an investigation of the tax payments of various townships in the nonhigh school district. She found that 85 per cent of the 1930 taxes have been paid in Schaumburg township, as against an average of 59 per cent in the county at large.

Similar figures for Leyden township show how Schaumburg taxpayers' money is helping to pay for the education of pupils in other townships. The population of Leyden township quadrupled between 1920 and 1930. The population of Elmwood Park, which is in the township, jumped from 1,380 to 11,270 in the same period.

Send 800 Students.

Leyden township sends about 800 high school pupils, the majority from Elmwood Park, to schools where their tuition is paid by the nonhigh school district. This is several times the average number of students in an Illinois high school. Leyden township's share of the 1930 nonhigh school levy was $32,000. Of this only 44 per cent, or about $14,000, has been collected. The tuition paid by the district for pupils from the township, at the average rate for the county of $182 per pupil, is approximately $145,000, more than ten times the taxes contributed to the common tuition fund.

Leyden township and Elmwood Park are the particularly sore spots in the nonhigh school district's large list of troubles. Attorney Adam Schilling of Tinley Park, one of the district trustees, is drafting a bill which would exclude from the nonhigh school district villages with a population of more than 5,000. If the legislature passes it Elmwood Park would have to provide for the education of its own high school pupils, and the tax burden on the district as a whole would be cut one-third.

Another bill, already pending in the legislature, provides a much more radical remedy. It would abolish nonhigh school districts entirely.

30 Miles from School.

The law under which the district now operates has given rise to other situations, some of them comical, except to the taxpayers who are footing the bills. For instance, the bill provides that the student may attend any approved high school he chooses. As a result one youth from Calumet township is going to New Trier High school, 30 odd miles from his home, and the district pays his tuition.

IN COURT TODAY

[Acme Photo.]

PLAN TO BRING TAX COLLECTION BACK TO NORMAL

Council Experts Draft Six Year Program.

The payment of seven years' taxes within a period of six years, thus bringing tax collections back to normal without burdening property owners with two tax bills in one year, is the goal of a program outlined yesterday by city hall tax experts.

The program was devised by John A. Richert, chief, and two members of the council finance committee staff, Frank Cenfield and Frank Flanagan, and V. S. Petterson, deputy city controller. They will submit their views to a committee, whose membership includes the heads of all the major local governments, which is scanning legislative proposals for tax relief.

Plan Installment Payments.

Their plan proposes to make it optional for property owners to pay 1931, 1932, and 1933 taxes in installments over a period of six years. If a property owner chooses to do so he may pay 60 per cent of his 1931 taxes this year and 10 per cent during each of the following four years.

For collection of the 1932 and 1933 taxes the plan provides the following schedule: Property owners to pay 50 per cent of the 1932 taxes on March 1, 1934, and 50 per cent of the 1933 taxes on Sept. 1, 1934. During each of the following four years an installment payment of 12½ per cent of the taxes for those two years would be due with the first installment of taxes regularly payable each year.

How Schedule Operates.

How this schedule would operate for the owners of real estate is shown in the following table, listing the percentage of taxes due each year:

Taxes of year.	1933.	1934.	1935.	1936.	1937.	1938.
1931	60%	10%	10%	10%	10%	....
1932	....	50	12½	12½	12½	12½
1933	....	50	12½	12½	12½	12½
1934	....	....	100	....	....	....
1935	....	....	....	100	....	....
1936	....	....	....	....	100	....
1937	....	....	....	....	....	100

Then, in 1939, the entire 1938 bill would be payable and tax collections would be returned to normal.

Some doubt has been expressed whether legislation applicable to 1931 taxes could be passed at this time, but the experts included 1931 taxes in the plan, leaving the legality to be determined later. They also wanted to do something with the delinquent taxes of 1928, 1929, and 1930, but were restricted by an opinion that installment payments for those years would be unconstitutional.

One Roll for Two Years.

Under the experts' schedule it would be necessary to have the 1932 and 1933 tax rolls completed not later than Jan. 1, 1934. Because of the limited time, they suggested that only one tax roll be prepared for the two years if that can be done legally.

The experts also mentioned in their report that the tax burden would be lightened by relief afforded by continued reduction of tax levies, and by a readjustment of tax assessment between real and other forms of property.

Two other legislative suggestions made in the report are that the county collector pro rate interest and penalties paid on delinquent taxes and on payments made under the installment plan, and that the board of education be authorized to issue refunding bonds.

RECEIVE FIRST '31 REAL ESTATE TAX PROTESTS TODAY

The office of the board of tax appeals will open today for the filing of objections against the assessed valuations of real estate under the 1931 quadrennial revaluation.

Hearings on these objections will not start for probably a week because of the absence from the city of Fred W. Brummel and George F. Nixon, members of the appeals board. Mr. Brummel is in California and Mr. Nixon is in Florida. They are expected back Feb. 27.

Already thousands of tax bills on the 1931 revaluation have been sent out by County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough. Hearings on protests will follow the order in which the bills were received. For instance, tax bills were mailed first to New Trier and Oak Park. Thus objections from these places will take precedence in hearings over others. Also, it will be more or less required that objectors pay the first installments of their assessments. Any reductions granted will be deducted from the second installment.

Assessor J. L. Jacobs said yesterday that he believed the 1931 real estate objections would be smaller in number than those of any previous assessments.

GRAND JURY WILL GET RECORDS OF INSULL CO. TODAY

The books and records of the defunct Corporation Securities company, $150,000,000 Insull investment trust, will be taken before the federal grand jury today as the government resumes its presentation of evidence on which mail fraud indictments will be sought. Some twenty investors who lost their savings in the Insull enterprise will go before the jury during the week. United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, it is reported, will ask that more than a dozen persons be named in true bills to be returned by the end of the week.

HOLD UP PARKING STATION.

QUICKEST WAY TO KNOCK A COLD

Millions Say of This Proved Way You Feel Like a New Person Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system and you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. Results will surprise you. Costs only a few cents.

ILLUSION:

Look at this remarkable lady... with three lovely and perfect heads...all attached to a normal body. She appears to sit on the stage with the lower part of her body concealed by flowers. She can wink, smile, and nod. She can talk, laugh, and sing—all at the same time. Thousands of people have seen this feat of magic and pronounced it a wonderful sight!

EXPLANATION:

Audiences used to pay an extra fee to go behind the scenes to see how this trick was worked. They discovered that the three-headed woman was merely a reflection in a mirror. The glass showed the heads of three girls but the body of only one. The other two were cleverly hidden so that only their heads showed in the mirror.

It's fun to be fooled— ...it's more fun to KNOW

This "three-headed woman" trick goes 'way back to the early days of magic.

Also old is the suggestion that protection for your throat and freedom from coughing can be achieved through some magic trick.

THE EXPLANATION: The easiest cigarette on your throat is the cigarette that is made from the choicest, ripe tobaccos.

Cheap, raw tobaccos are, as you would naturally expect, harsh to the throat. Ripe, costly tobaccos are mild, mellow—gentle.

The question is whether a cigarette is made from cheap tobacco or the more expensive grades.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

American men and women have smoked more billions of Camels than any other brand because of the appeal of more expensive tobaccos and matchless blending.

Won't you stack up your own experience with a cigarette made from milder, costlier tobaccos ...against magic claims about "cigarettes and your throat"?

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE BEST ADVICE GOES UNHEEDED.

Mrs. Herrick's reports of the senatorial clinic on the depression indicate pretty clearly that the senators participating are growing restless. Perhaps some of them are not hearing what they wanted to hear. They wanted the eminent business men they have summoned to recommend the fancier medicines, but these gentlemen for much the most part have confined their suggestions to diet and exercise.

One after another, beginning with Mr. Baruch, they have said reduce expenditures, balance the budget, and leave the currency alone. There have been a few interludes, such as that of Mr. Rene Leon, who advocated the freer use of silver in the coinage, but he has been the exception. Mr. Myron Taylor, chairman of the board of the steel corporation; Mr. Jackson Reynolds, president of the First National bank of New York, and John W. Davis, presidential nominee in 1924, all told the same story with slight variations. Cut down the expenditures; reduce taxes.

Just how effective this consultation of the experts has been is suggested by the contemporaneous action of the house and senate on the appropriation bills. For example, there is the interior department's appropriation bill. The house had already added half a million dollars to its own appropriation committee's estimate when the senate took the bill in hand and added close to $200,000 more. In the house only thirty-three members, most of them from western beggar states, were on hand to consider the bill. In the senate the management of the bill was intrusted to the same element. The taxpayers' voice was not heard.

The chief cause of the depression is the congress of the United States.

NOT SO CRAZY AS WE ARE.

A youth of 16, John Labadie, was found insane in March, 1931, and committed to Kankakee. The finding was one of organic brain disease, yet he was discharged as "improved" in April. In May he was recommitted. In October he escaped. In December he was recaptured and sent this time to Dunning. A year later he escaped, Dec. 6, 1932. A few weeks ago he was taken up by the police and now confesses or boasts that he has committed more than 200 robberies and burglaries and raped several women. How many crimes he has committed cannot be known, but that he is a persistent and dangerous criminal is certain.

And Labadie now says: "You can't do anything to me; I'm crazy."

Unfortunately, this is correct. As Col. Chamberlin, director of the crime commission, remarks: "As an escaped inmate of an insane asylum he is legally insane and he cannot be punished for his crimes." Dr. Coffey of Dunning says Labadie will never recover his reason and if recommitted to Dunning will be passed along to Chester, an institution for the criminal insane, to be kept there until he dies.

That is, he will be kept there if he doesn't escape again. Doubtless Chester is less careless with its inmates than our other asylums. But Labadie's story should not be dismissed with this conclusion. It proves beyond question that the present handling of dangerous criminals and potential criminals is grossly inefficient. We note that Labadie was found by a court to be suffering from organic brain disease and sent to the Kankakee asylum. Why was he set free after a month at that institution? What was the "improvement" by which this release was officially justified? An organic disease, we suppose, is not likely to be so improved in a month as to justify an institution in setting a patient at large, at least if his derangement was potentially dangerous. The release of Labadie requires explanation. Was it official irresponsibility, or medical incompetence, or politics, or bribery? Whatever the explanation, a dangerous brute was set free upon the public and for two years since his "organic brain disease" was judicially determined has been committing serious crimes.

There is something seriously wrong with the administration of our present system of control. But also we think there is something wrong with our law and policy regarding insanity and crime. Labadie, for example, is sane enough to escape repeatedly from control and to keep out of reach for long periods of time. He is sane enough to know that because he has been declared insane he cannot be punished for crime. This indicates an ability to reason from cause to effect, to understand consequences and take advantage of them. He knows that he is breaking the law and he knows that he cannot be punished for his acts.

This ought to constitute legal responsibility. But if it is not to constitute legal responsibility, we at least should lose no time in establishing a system of restraint which will restrain. We ought to cease experimenting with the possibilities of "improvement." If there are doubts they should be resolved in favor of the community. Officials who make costly errors should be removed.

THE DAIRY FARMERS AND THEIR MARKET.

The Pure Milk association, consisting of 18,000 dairy farmers supplying the Chicago market, has gone on record against ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty. The farmers believe, and rightly, that the prosperity of Chicago is their prosperity. They fear that the treaty as now written will result in destroying the investment in the lakes to gulf waterway now about to open. That would work injury to the Chicago metropolitan area and thereby work injury to the men who support themselves and their families by supplying Chicago with its milk.

The most significant aspect of the protest of the Pure Milk association is the fact that its members are not all Illinois farmers. Scores of the local units of the association are to be found in Indiana and Wisconsin. These states were among the original enemies of the diversion of Lake Michigan water and Wisconsin is still in the forefront of the opposition. That the government of Wisconsin has been misrepresenting its people and their true interests in this matter has been evident for years and it must be humiliating to the officials of the neighboring states who have joined in the conspiracy against Chicago to find that they have now been publicly repudiated by an influential and important section of their own people.

SNOW, BUT NO SNOW SHOVELERS.

The citizen who reads in his morning paper that there are 160,000 families and close to 600,000 individuals in Chicago today living on public charity has been wondering of late why no effort has been made to get any return from the immense sums parceled out to the needy. The expenditures in this county on relief are now proceeding at the rate of $80,000,000 a year, but the residence streets were still blocked with snow a week after the snow fell. Every penny of the relief funds will have to be paid back sooner or later by the taxpayers, but the taxpayers get not even the service of snow shovelers for their money.

There must be more than a hundred thousand able-bodied men on the relief lists. Most of them have warm clothing or can get it, and none of them have anything to do. If the relief funds are not sufficient to hire trucks to remove the snow, the money is adequate at least to provide shovels for clearing the walks, traffic lanes, gutters and fire hydrants. Not much supervision would be required. The willingness to shovel would serve as a highly effective test of the worthiness of the recipient of charity and a valuable check upon the judgment of the social workers who have reported favorably on his case.

Most of the men out of work would much rather give some service in return for their support than live in idleness. They ought to be given the chance, and if Mike Carrozzo, the alien boss of the street cleaners' union, doesn't like it, that's just too bad. Mike and his union are not concerned. If he makes trouble, the jail which made room for him some years ago can accommodate him again, and if it happens to be overcrowded at the moment, there ought not be much difficulty in deporting him to his native land where problems of snow shoveling are negligible. If that outrages his feelings, he can tell his troubles to Mussolini, who no doubt will lend a sympathetic ear.

LICENSE PLATES.

Observation of motor traffic on Chicago streets impresses the wayfarer with the number of last year's license plates still doing duty. The law calls for new plates January 1st, but the practice has been to allow some leeway. Nothing is gained by such a practice. It is as easy to make the arrangements required by law in December as a month or two months later, and it is better for all concerned to have a legal rule and enforce it. A leeway is certain to be abused. It is unjust to the man who conforms to the law. It opens the way to favoritism and is bad for police morale. We have developed a bad habit of juggling and dodging regulations, a habit which has been encouraged by unreasonable laws.

By this date there should be a 1933 plate on every car. The police might help toward getting their salaries paid by enforcing the license law.

Editorial of the Day

WHAT IOWA FARMERS WANT.

[Sioux City Journal.]

L. E. Skelley's dispatch in the Journal from Des Moines describing what Iowa farmers in seeking moratoriums really want is believed to be typical of the great majority. Mr. Skelley wrote that "wholesale repudiation of debts is not considered." What the farmers do demand is a "fighting chance to save their property and their lifetime savings."

Iowa farmers have been rather severely criticized for going so deeply into debt. Farm mortgages in Iowa reach a total of more than $1,000,000,000. This is the largest total of farm mortgage indebtedness in any state of the Union. Critics point out that Iowa is the most fertile large area in the United States, perhaps in all the world. Also that it has been under cultivation for generations, and that the owners of the land should have been able to sustain themselves without shouldering the enormous burden of debt.

No doubt a good many Iowa farmers who are loaded down with mortgages would admit they made mistakes years ago when they undertook to buy more acreage and put up what land they had as security. But, as one man told Mr. Skelley, he was able to carry the burden of his mortgage at the time it was negotiated. It was what came afterward that made things impossible for this farmer, and he is one of thousands in the state. Most of them could have paid out, or at least could have carried the burden of indebtedness, if their dollar, meaning the prices of their commodities, had retained its value.

So, as the whole thing is viewed at this time, the situation is one that must be handled as a condition, not a theory. Even if some farmers did make mistakes, or even if all of them were in error, the unprecedented situation is one from which they ought to be given a chance to emerge. If a parent tells a child not to play near the river and the child makes the error of disobeying and falls in, should the father or mother permit the little fellow to drown? Rescue comes first in a case of that kind, and the lecture—and the spanking—afterward.

If the American people were unable to believe that an overwhelming majority of the farm population was honest, confidence could not be restored at all. It would be about time for everybody to give up. Past history is sufficient to show that the farmers of this country are dependable, trustworthy, and industrious. Ninety-nine in 100 would pay their debts in full if it were made possible for them to do so.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

"POURS KEROSENE on Fire; Dies in Flames." "Blows Out Gas in Country Hotel; Dies."—Last Saturday headlines. And we brag about our schools and the intelligence of the sovereign citizens of these United States. What's the use!

OF COURSE, there's no use trying to stop people from blowing out the gas instead of turning it out. But the death rate due to that cause was reduced by the introduction of the incandescent globe. Naturally, they tried to blow them out, too, but after they blew until they were black in the face they gave it up as a bad job and went to bed with the light on.

BUT NO MATTER how many stories the newspapers print of fatalities and burnings due to explosions of kerosene used in persuading recalcitrant kitchen fires to get busy, the casualties keep right on. Our suggestion is to get an inventor to patent a kerosene oil can that when held near a kitchen stove rings a bell, shouts "Put me down or I'll explode," and then reaches out a long lever that comes down with a bang on the head of the bird that is holding the kerosene can. Not that it would do much good, but it might help some.

SECOND ACT.

This is the end—But, Oh, my dear, go quickly!
Don't tell me of the many, many evenings
We've read aloud, gay fire-light on the floor.

This is the end—No play can run forever,
Ours leaves the boards tonight, we have agreed;
Don't tell me of the stars we've touched together,
Don't speak of times we've met each other's need.

And if sometimes I feel your arms close-holding,
And if you want my lips, just now and then,
We shall not speak of this at casual meetings,
Now we'll be strangers, brave, amused again.

This is the end—we say good-by so oddly!
(Such little things draw women back to men!)
I was not true and you were never faithful——
Oh, well, sit down, the play begins again!

HELEN WELSHIMER.

ALL ENGLAND IS TERRIBLY EXCITED over a mysterious prisoner in the Tower of London. The question has been asked in parliament and many letters have been written to the Times about it. The government has been forced to admit that the prisoner in the Tower is a lieutenant in the Seaforth Highlanders and that he is charged with infraction of the official secrets acts. Oh! We thought that probably it was just to stimulate the American tourist trade at the Tower. The tourists have been awfully fed up on seeing the place where Anne Boleyn and Lady Jane Grey had their heads lopped off behind their ears, and were even known to yawn when gazing on Traitor's Gate, "where the heminent Cardinal Wolsey passed through on 'is wye to himprisonment shortly before 'is hexecution." Anyhow, we'll bet the box office receipts at the Tower have jumped amazingly since they threw the mysterious prisoner into that ancient hoosegow.

BANDITS arrested by the police have displayed much irritation and disgust because their intended victims got off by saying, "I just cashed a check for a feller." The bandits make a strong point of the fact that lying is forbidden by the Ten Commandments. We sympathize deeply with the trusting bandits. People are like that. Look at what they did even about the 18th amendment! Of course, the 18th is going to be repealed, but lots of people act as though they thought the Ten Commandments were repealed. Oh, the poor bandits!

SPEAKEASY.

Speakeasy, while you drink your fill;
Speakeasy, while you're here,
For you are standing in the midst
Of broken dreams, my dear.

That man who orders highball
Was once a finance King,
From heavy losses he has turned
To all this sort of thing.

That pretty blonde, who takes hers straight,
Was last year's Follies star;
She got into a nasty jam;
Behold the purple scar!

The youth who orders silver fizz
Was once an earnest chap;
He lost his wife a while ago;
He's acting like a sap!

And look at that old lady,
So loaded down with jewels,
She got herself a gigolo,
The boy is still in school.

The owner looks quite weary,
But one can understand,
He studied to be a surgeon;
The war got his right hand.

Speakeasy, while you take your drinks,
This is a house of gloom;
Can't you smell decaying dreams
Among the whisky fumes?

EILEEN QUINLAN.

WE'D LIKE TO WRITE a paragraph about Dorothy Aldis' newest book, "Any Spring," that we hear so much about, but how can we? She hasn't sent us a copy, the stingy, and our feelings are hurt. We'll bet "Any Spring" is a grand little book, and we don't doubt you're all having a grand time reading it. You would. But we can't write a paragraph about "Any Spring" because we haven't a copy of it. Very well, we'll not mention it, no, not if Dorothy changes the name to "Any Summer." It might just as well be called "Any Winter" so far as our saying anything about it is concerned. Unless she sends us one.

"POLITICIANS CLASH in Barroom in Mexico; 8 Shot."—Headline. If two more had been shot—well, that would have been a revolution.

WE NEED LIME IN WINTER.

During the next few months health will suffer because the human body tends to run low in lime. We think of this chemical as the chief constituent of bone and teeth, and therefore as being a substance used to harden tissues and make them inelastic and unyielding. Nor should we forget this important use of lime while we consider other purposes it serves.

The body of the bones consists of fibrous tissue impregnated with lime salts. Within the hard shell and body of nearly every bone there lies a loose bony tissue called the spongy or cancellous bone. This is the lime warehouse. The lime stored there is ready prepared to go into solution and be carried away for use wherever it is wanted. If the amount of lime contained in the food is insufficient that in solution in the blood and tissues is used. Then the supply in the spongy bone is drawn on and when that has been exhausted absorption takes place from the hard bones and teeth, but this to only a limited extent.

Lime appears to be a stabilizer generally. Nervous children, those with croupy tendencies and with various kinds of jerks and spasms, generally are in need of lime. It also has a place in the treatment of nervous, on-edge people. What part it plays in protection against such infections as colds, coughs, pneumonia, and consumption is not understood, but there is a commonly accepted belief which the medical fraternity shares with the people that those with tendencies to colds and coughs and with what is called "weak lungs" are safer if they get plenty of lime, during the winter and spring at least.

Of the lime foods, cheese, milk, butter, and various milk products, nuts, and whole wheat grains are best. But in order to secure the absorption and use of lime it is necessary to give vitamin D and possibly also some preparation of parathyroid. Dr. May Mellanby gives the following as the best sources of this vitamin: Cod liver oil, halibut liver oil, other fish liver oils; fat fish such as salmon, herring, and mackerel; probably sardines, animal fats, and egg yolk. For some reason she excepts pork and cereals. The last she thinks destructive to this vitamin.

The value of parathyroid, which preparation to use, for what purpose to use it, and how to do so are still matters of experimentation. It is just as well to leave the derivatives of this gland to one side until the laboratory men have gone farther. There are medicinal preparations containing lime that have enjoyed long approval. Some of these are of service. One need not be wholly gambling when he decides whether or not to take lime preparations—those vitamins that help to make them available.

There are blood tests for lime and phosphorus that are of service and not too difficult to carry out. In certain disorders when too much lime has been absorbed from the bones X-ray pictures have been known to help in deciding the nature of the trouble.

REMOVING SCARS.

R. T. C. writes: Are scars on the body removable? I have two on my face and I am very sensitive about them.

REPLY.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

E. N. writes:

1. What kind of foods produce acid urine?
2. Do protein foods have that tendency?
3. What would produce black or blue spots without having been bruised in any way? These spots are swollen, sore, and painful at times.
4. Is a blood pressure of 190 for a man 59 years old dangerous?
5. Give list of foods to be avoided.

REPLY

1. Meat, eggs, cereals, and breads. Occasionally rhubarb, cranberries, and even pineapple has that effect.
2. Yes.
3. Probably some kind of purpura.
4. It is too high and it may be dangerous.
5. Food plays a secondary part in the treatment of arteriosclerosis. The diet should be simple. Vegetarianism has some advantages in this condition. Eat sparingly. If you do nothing but diet you will not get far.

BATH ITCH.

A reader writes: Can you give me the reason and a remedy for itching after a bath?

REPLY.

This is our old friend, bath itch.

Some use cold creams instead of soap and water. Some can use water but no soap. Neutral or superfatted soaps are sometimes tolerated when good dirt and grease cutting soaps cause symptoms.

INSURANCE BENEFICIARY.

Decatur, Ill., Feb. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A man murdered his wife, who was insured for $5,000. In case he is convicted and sent to prison does the company have to pay him the full amount, or is it a matter of how the policy reads, or do they return the premiums? Do insurance policies usually provide for such cases? Mine doesn't.

N. K. O.

Clearly he cannot take directly as beneficiary of a policy, but it is held in 229 Ill. 277 that lodge insurance can go to the heirs of the murderer and in 341 Ill. 548 on a straight life policy that the administrator of the deceased murderer is not entitled to the insurance as against the heirs of the insured.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNPAID WAGES.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. In the event a firm goes bankrupt voluntarily or involuntarily how are back wages of the firm from four to six months' standing treated? 2. Are they paid in full or prorated with the other creditors' claims? 3. If so, how can said wages be protected while the concern is still operating? J. M. M.

1. They would be treated the same as other general creditors. It is only wages earned within three months that are preferred.
2. See 1.
3. One way would be by securing a mortgage or other security from the employer. Another way would be by obtaining a judgment which would operate as a lien on real estate. We do not have the facts to choose.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOT SCRAP MATERIAL.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—[Friend of the People.]—The premises next door to our place is used for storing junk of all kinds. The tenants moved out about three months ago and left the yard in a terrible condition. There is no finished product or anything that can be used—only junk and rubbish. The yard is a disgrace and should be cleaned up. P. S.

Report is made that premises complained of is occupied by a construction firm, manufacturers of skylights and window frames. Material complained of is finished product and material to be used in construction work.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 20, 1917.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, commander of the department of the southwest, responsible for the direction of all the troops, regular and guardsmen, on the border, died almost instantly in the lobby of a hotel here tonight. Death came as he was talking to a group of friends with whom he had had dinner a few minutes earlier. Gen. Funston, apparently in the best of health, was playing with Inez Silverberg, a Des Moines child, who is visiting the hotel with her parents. The orchestra in the adjoining room was playing the "Blue Danube" waltz. The group ceased talking to listen and Gen. Funston remarked, "How beautiful it all is," and collapsed. He passed away without recovering consciousness or speaking another word.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The senate concluded debate on the administration bill to punish espionage, violations of neutrality, and conspiracies by agents or sympathizers of foreign governments. Passage of the measure is expected tomorrow.

LONDON.—On the afternoon of Feb. 17 an assault was made on the Sennaiyat position on the left bank of the Tigris and the enemy's two front lines were occupied on a frontage of 350 yards and 540 yards, respectively. Two heavy Turkish counter attacks were launched, the first one hour and the second one and a half hours after the British had obtained possession of these trenches. The former counter attack was repulsed, but the latter was partly successful. On the south bank of the Tigris west of the Shumran bend further progress has been made.

LONDON. — British troops carried out a successful raid east of Souchez. A hostile mine shaft was blown up and several occupied dugouts were destroyed.

PARIS.—Patrols were active in the region of Barnhaupt-Le Haut. The activity of the two artilleries was quite marked in the sectors of Avocourt, Cote du Poivre, and Bezonvaux yesterday. French batteries effectively shelled the German organizations north of Damloup. In Alsace a surprise attack against the adversary lines at Barenkopf north of Munster enabled French troops to capture prisoners.

CHICAGO.—Marjorie Delbridge, the 14 year old white girl who was taken from her colored foster mother, Mrs. Camilla Jackson, by the juvenile court, has told Assistant State's Attorney Robert E. Hogan the complete story of her abduction from Chicago. As a result of the child's confession, Mr. Hogan said, charges of conspiracy and perjury will be brought against Mrs. Jackson, Attorney James G. Cotter, Chester De Armond, Cotter's law partner, and Mrs. Sadie De Armond Muse, De Armond's daughter, a student of law. In her story Marjorie stated that Mrs. Camilla Jackson, who had reared her since babyhood; Cotter, who is Mrs. Jackson's colored attorney, and Mrs. Muse had engineered her escape from the city.

NEW YORK.—Count von Bernstroff hurried to his ship in this city on his homeward trip to avoid the possible carrying out of an assassination threat contained in a letter typewritten on New York police department stationery by what proved later to be a New York patrolman who had lost a relative when the Lusitania was sunk. The letter, anonymous, was received at the German embassy in Washington on Feb. 5. The disclosure of its author was the result of an investigation by secret service men from Washington and a trap laid by Acting Police Commissioner Godley.

ON HIS WAY TO ACCUMULATING SOMETHING

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

FROM MR. JUSTICE O'CONNOR.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Yesterday I read in the papers that the vicious criminal who attempted to assassinate President Elect Roosevelt and wounded Mayor Cermak at Miami bought the revolver with which he did the shooting an hour or so before in Miami. It is humiliating, if not criminal, to permit the sale of concealable firearms by practically every one, cranks included, without let or hindrance. Except in rare cases such weapons are procured but for one purpose—viz.: to kill some human.

Some ten years ago we collected information on the carrying of concealable weapons from most of the civilized countries and finally prepared a bill, modeled after the English firearms act of 1920, which was introduced in the Illinois legislature a number of times, but the bill failed of passage. It is now again pending before the legislature as house bill No. 46, having been introduced by Representative Connors of the 29th district. Just why the passage of this bill is opposed by a great many law-abiding citizens it is difficult to understand. If the bill were enacted into law it would prevent any one from having possession of a concealed weapon unless he was given a certificate under very guarded regulations by the sheriff or chief of police and we expect, if the bill were passed, that very few, if any, such permits would be issued. When practically every one is entitled to have a pistol or revolver we can expect the continuation of crimes of violence.

JOHN M. O'CONNOR,
Judge, Appellate Court.

THE RIGHT TO GO ARMED.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—The dastardly attempt upon the life of the President elect and the fact that Mayor Cermak and a number of other victims are hovering between life and death as the result of a maniacal communist being permitted to purchase firearms as if the commodity were a pound of sugar ought to arouse our lawmakers to the criminality of a system which permits dealers to sell firearms without restriction.

Law-abiding citizens do not carry firearms. Why should criminals, racketeers, maniacs, and the like be permitted to either purchase or carry firearms?

For the benefit of the citizens at large, no firearms should be sold to any one except those licensed to carry arms and for good and sufficient reason. Officers, watchmen, sportsmen, and others who are responsible citizens would have no difficulty in qualifying for a license. Fix a heavy jail sentence without alternative of a fine for any one carrying, selling, or distributing firearms without a license.

JOHN P. JONES.

SUBVERSIVE MEETINGS.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—In view of the fact that our mayor has been seriously wounded by a confessed anarchist I wish to raise the question as to whether these people should be allowed to hold public meetings without the presence of a police officer. Last winter I made an investigation and attended five of these communistic meetings. There were several present at each of these meetings who were evidently candidates for the psychopathic hospital.

The speakers aroused these weak-minded people by false statements and misrepresentations. One of the speakers said, "Go down to State street, smash the windows, and take what you want." Another speaker said, "Let us get rid of Hoover and his gang." There were other expressions of a similar nature. I tried to make them feel ashamed. I tried to show them their mistakes. I asked them why they did not leave the country and go to Russia, the country which they praised. I showed them how necessary it was to have a President and to have business leaders. My remarks were met usually by jeers and laughter.

It was pitiful to look into the faces of many of the audience because they were on the border of insanity, ready to do anything which the speakers suggested. I have no doubt but that this man who attempted to assassinate President Elect Roosevelt had attended meetings of this character. If such meetings as are now being held in our city are allowed to continue without police supervision no public man will be safe.

JOHNSTON MYERS.

PROGRESS.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Edward J. Eisle claims that we are more advanced than those who lived in the time of Moses or King Solomon, or our Pilgrim Fathers, or George Washington, because we are not as ignorant as they were as to what is good or bad for us.

I maintain that had these gentlemen lived in the 20th century Moses could have used a machine gun to mow down a dozen men at once and get away with it, instead of using his fists to strike down just one man; King Solomon would probably have a wife in every port instead of living in peace and harmony with all his wives under one roof (although I do not believe in bigamy). Our Pilgrim Fathers would have been forced to drink poisonous wood alcohol instead of healthful good legal beer, and George Washington, if he had lived today, would probably be forced to make appeals for raising funds to feed 13 million instead of having plenty of food and clothing for all.

And Mr. Eisle still thinks that prohibition is beneficial and a modern improvement.

MARCUS ADLER.

THE BURDEN BEARERS.

Evanston, Ill., Feb. 15.—We have just read with interest your editorial in today's TRIBUNE, entitled "Tax Strikers." We feel that you are not giving sufficient recognition to those who have been paying their taxes. For not only have they been carrying the burden of those who have not paid their taxes on real estate, but they are and have been carrying the load for the owners of the sixteen billion dollars' worth of unassessed personal property in the county.

BLIND JUSTICE.

QUESTION.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—I wonder if the robbers who held up the ex-insurance officer's home were policy holders looking for some of their own money?

SEE 'SOFT SPOT' IN GRADE SCHOOL DIPLOMA COSTS

Buehler Would Bar Frequent "Graduations."

In search for "soft spots" where the 71 million dollar school budget expenditures may b trimmed, Trustee Ernest Buehler of the board of education took a look yesterday at the numerous graduation exercises in the public schools. In Mr. Buehler's opinion diplomas should be awarded only to students who have completed a senior high school course.

With the expansion of Chicago's educational system during the last twenty years, Mr. Buehler pointed out, there has grown up a practice of handing diplomas to children who finish the first eight grades of public school and to pupils who finish junior high schools, which include the seventh, eighth and ninth grades. Also there are graduating exercises for pupils who complete the two and three year high school courses, high school prevocational and the evening schools.

Hinder Child's Training.

"Aside from the cost of the diplomas and overtime pay for janitorial and engineering services at night graduations," asserted Mr. Buehler, "a child is given the idea that he or she has reached a certain stage of perfection when given a document attesting to a certain amount of public schooling completed.

"The result is that the child upon receiving a diploma in junior high school, for example, thinks that the schooling has been sufficient and doesn't have an incentive to go further. The numerous graduations at various steps in the educational journey not only are useless, but they tend to defeat our purpose, which is to furnish our children with as complete an education as possible, as economically as possible."

Mr. Buehler added that for two weeks in June and two weeks in January, the latter at the mid-school year graduations, the minds of the pupils and teachers are bent upon the coming graduation.

Diplomas Cost $8,200 Year.

"This time could better be devoted to instruction which, after all, is the real purpose of the schools," he reasoned.

In 1932 the diploma cost amounted to $8,200, in contrast with $7,261 for the item in 1929. The educational department is expected to complete its specifications within the next few days, after which bids for the 1933 diplomas will be sought.

The numbers of diplomas purchased by the school board for graduations in June, 1932, and January, 1933, were as follows: Elementary schools, 29,800; junior high schools, 14,000; senior high schools, 15,000; two and three year high school courses, 8,000; high school prevocational, 1,250; evening schools, 1,500, and normal college, 900.

KILLS HIMSELF OVER POVERTY.

Hans Jansen 48 years old, shot and killed himself yesterday in his room at 2623 West North avenue. Police were told he was despondent over poverty and ill health.

TORTURE GANG ROBS VISITOR IN HIS HOTEL ROOM

Three bandits made Thomas Woods, owner of a Minneapolis trucking company, a prisoner yesterday in his room in the Grant Park hotel, 1148 South Michigan avenue and threatened him with torture in the belief that he had a large amount of money hidden in the room.

He convinced them that he had only $35 before they carried out their threat of burning the soles of his feet with matches. The bandits then bound and gagged him and left the building.

The robbers engaged a room in the hotel several days ago, and early yesterday called James Pope, night clerk, to their room. They tied him up and robbed him of $17 before going to Woods' room.

"FAGIN" AND TWO BOYS CONFESS 40 ROBBERIES

Frank Brouk, alias Borden, 23 years old, and two youths who charge that he trained them in banditry were identified at the detective bureau yesterday by victims of some 40 robberies on the northwest side. The other prisoners are Walter Janoza, 21 years old, who said he lived with Brouk at 1894 Milwaukee avenue, and John Labacka, 18 years old, 1538 Tell place.

Patrolmen Adam Klonowski and Arthur March of the automobile detail found an automobile parked early yesterday outside a restaurant at Augusta street and Ashland avenue, the license plate of which indicated that it was stolen. They found Brouk inside with two women and arrested him. The two youths were arrested later.

All three confessed and rode about with police in squad cars, pointing out meat markets and groceries which they had robbed. Labacka and Janoza said that they went into the places and perpetrated the actual robberies, while Brouk, their tutor, kept watch outside. The trio have also been connected with the theft of a dozen automobiles which they took after holding up the drivers, Policemen Klonowski and March said.

PHONE MYSTERY ATTACK.

The Chicago Lawn police yesterday were investigating an assault on Nathan Krilloff, 33 years old, 6306 South Hermitage avenue, who was severely beaten by two men in front of his home. Krilloff was unable to account for the attack.

PERUVIAN RULER FLAYS COLOMBIA FOR 'AGGRESSION'

Nation Aroused by Dispute Over Leticia.

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Enthusiastic crowds in the main square in front of the palace last night heard President Luis M. Sanchez Cerro declare that "Peru is vibrating patriotically as the reaction to unjustified Colombian aggression" in the Leticia difficulty.

LUIS SANCHEZ CERRO.

The president asserted every step would be taken to defend national territory and continued:

"I am sure that I can count upon the cooperation of patriotic Peruvians."

Charges Neutrality Violation.

Similar demonstrations were held in Callao and southern seaside resorts until a late hour of the night.

In his speech the president also charged that "a mercenary expedition carrying the Colombian flag" had violated Brazilian neutrality and had taken shelter in Brazilian waters.

He said that Peru had always respected the treaty covering the nationality of the city of Leticia, "disregarding how and under what pressure it was concluded." He added that it is time "to repulse force with force."

[The president apparently was referring to the treaty which Peru and Colombia entered into in settling the boundary dispute between the two nations. Sovereignty in the Leticia territory was given by Peru to Colombia in exchange for other considerations. Last September a group of Peruvian nationals seized the city and ousted Colombian officials, contending that Colombia had not complied with all the terms of the treaty.]

"Our Foes Will Learn."

"The whole of Peru," the president said, "is on its feet to defend her nationality and honor. Serenely the nation will confront all emergencies. Our foes will learn soon what it means to attack Peru."

Many organizations, headed by the city council, continued preparations for a patriotic parade tomorrow night as a demonstration of popular feeling regarding the Letician trouble. Pavements have been covered with painted inscriptions reading, "Leticia Is Peruvian," and "Let's Defend Northeastern Peru."

Morning newspapers contained communications from professional groups saying they would join in the demonstration. Dispatches from the provinces described demonstrations being held daily, even before the latest conflict between Peruvian and Colombian forces in the Leticia area.

Air Battle at Tarapaca.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Dispatches from Sao Paulo de Olivenca today said that Peruvian airplanes Friday bombarded Colombian forces at Tarapaca, on the Putumayo river north of the disputed border city of Leticia. A Peruvian plane was reported to have been shot down. The Colombian air force was said to have been reinforced by a squadron from Pedrera, 100 miles to the north on the Rio Caqueta river.

Eight Peruvians Taken Prisoner.

PARA, Brazil, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Reports reaching here today from Sao Paulo de Olivenca, Brazil, said that Colombian forces had taken eight Peruvian prisoners at Tarapaca, the village north of Leticia where open hostilities broke out last week between Colombia and Peru.

The Colombian gunboat Pichincha has returned to neutral waters of the Amazon from the Putumayo river, on which Tarapaca is located, to await the arrival of supply boats.

Man Bitten by Squirrel; Woman an Earlier Victim

Mount Vernon, Ill., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Ralph Spartman is being treated by a physician for a wound on the leg inflicted by a gray squirrel which attacked and bit him while he was walking on the street late yesterday. The same squirrel bit a woman a short time before. Mount Vernon has many gray squirrels, but none had been known to attack any one. It was suggested the squirrel may have been bitten by a rabid dog or cat. The squirrel was killed.

HEAD OF BRAZIL STALLS ELECTION TO HOLD POWER

Vote for Assembly May Be Delayed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BAHIA, Brazil, Feb. 9.—[By mail to avoid censor.]—Political parties springing up like mushrooms throughout the country in anticipation of the promised return to a constitutional government in May are doomed to disappointment, it appeared today. A government decree just issued indicates there will be no election in that month.

DR. GETULIO VARGAS. [Acme Photo.]

Until a few days ago the provisional government of President Getulio Vargas insisted that elections of representatives to a constitutional assembly would be held on May 3. This was in accordance with the promise given by President Vargas last summer in return for the support of the powerful states of Rio Grande do Sul and Minas Geraes in suppressing the rebellion in Sao Paulo.

[The Sao Paulo rebels gave as their objective a return to a constitutional government for Brazil. They claimed the President Vargas had retained control longer than necessary.]

Not Willing to Quit.

The decree just issued, however, denies office holders in the present government the right to be candidates for constitutional representatives unless they resign 90 days before the day of election. None of them appears willing to do so.

Consequently political opinion generally is that the elections will be postponed. Furthermore, the regiment of employés making a draft constitution are trying to delay the job as long as possible in order to obtain that many more pay envelopes.

While the existence of a serious opposition to President Vargas is denied in government circles, it is known to exist on a fairly large scale and, if ever given a chance to register at the polls, promises to cause some real surprises. Although leaders of the opposition have been deprived of their political rights and will not be able to run for office, that is not considered a sufficient factor in favor of the government.

Point to Defense Cost.

The opposition is obtaining some ammunition for its guns from the government's policy regarding the Peru-Colombian conflict. The border line is packed with Brazilian soldiers and ships, and opposition newspapers are not hesitating to point out the cost, which is about $150,000 daily.

The border conflict, however, may be one means of prolonging the Vargas régime, since it will direct the country's attention away from politics.

2 FLYERS DIE IN FIRE WHEN PLANE CRASHES

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Traditional rivals in athletics, Yale and Harvard have agreed to become partners in what they described as "a novel experiment in American education."

The Yale law school and the Harvard graduate school of business administration announced tonight they will give a joint course in law and business. Students will be required to spend three years in New Haven and one year in Cambridge, Mass.

Students will be selected by representatives of both schools and will be limited in number.

They will study at the Yale law school the first year, go to the Harvard school of business administration the next year and will return to New Haven for the final two years. Students successfully completing the courses will be awarded the degree of bachelor of laws by Yale.

LETTERS EFFECT IDENTIFICATION OF SLAIN BANDIT

Two anonymous letters, one received by police and the other by relatives, led yesterday to the identification of the robber who was killed in a holdup of Vasel's clothing store, 1035 West Madison street, on Feb. 10 as Al Weimerslage, 19 years old, 3979 Elston avenue.

Des Plaines street police received a letter saying information about the holdup could be obtained at 2109 Warren boulevard. Detectives Frank McCormick and James Fitzgerald went there and found Henry and Leroy Weimerslage, brothers of the dead man, Leroy B. Ronk, their brother-in-law, and Otto Schaefer. Ronk said he had just received a letter saying his brother-in-law's body was in the county morgue. Ronk accompanied police and identified the body.

Four pistols were found in the house and all four men were taken to the bureau of identification. Weimerslage was killed by Thomas Pavlakes, one of the owners of the clothing store, when three men attempted the holdup.

BREAK WINDOW; STEAL FUR.

BACK TO FARM, PRINCE LEOPOLD'S CURE FOR CONGO

Diamond, Copper Shutdowns Affect Colony.

BY ANN SOMERS HOUSE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS, Feb. 19.—On a mission unique for a prince, Leopold, Belgium's tall, blond heir to the throne, is in the Belgian Congo trying to find out whether the industrialized, now unemployed Negro population of the huge equatorial colony can be turned "back to the land."

Like any official of the department of colonies, Prince Leopold will write a report and submit it to the department, to parliament and to his father, King Albert. If it is accepted, the 32 year old prince will have guided Belgian colonial policies in a new track.

Belgian Congo is 80 times greater than the mother country for whom the prince's great-uncle, Leopold II., acquired it, and some day will be the prince's precious and burdensome heritage.

Admires Dutch Methods.

The prince, passionately interested in colonial life, and keenly observant, has made two visits to the Dutch East Indies and believes that few nations have succeeded so well as the Dutch in governing colonial natives and keeping them healthy.

The depression weighs heavily on the Congo colony because copper production has been cut down, diamond mines have been closed and lesser industries wiped out. In previous trips to the Congo the prince observed that the native population of nearly 2,000,000 was decreasing. He attributed this to too rapid industrialization and migration from farms to cities. As a remedy he favors a retreat and a vast campaign of hygiene. He also approves of experimental farms to improve methods and crops.

Astrid Goes Along.

The "Colonial Prince," Belgium's counterpart to the prince of Wales, has done much overseas traveling. He went to the Congo for the first time in 1925, as a bachelor, and twice after that, but this time his wife, Princess Astrid is with him.

Their two children, the little Princess Josephine-Charlotte and tiny Prince Baudouin were left in the good care of a staff of nurses and King Albert and Queen Elizabeth.

U.S. INVESTIGATES STREET HAWKERS OF SHEET MUSIC

Federal officials, under the direction of Assistant United States District Attorney Edward A. Fisher, this week will start an investigation of violations of the United States copyright laws in the middle west.

Chicago has become a mecca for the illicit street hawkers of sheet music according to federal officials, with the prospects of the world's fair visitors as the lure.

According to federal agents, who have been working in cooperation with the American Authors and Composers' society, thousands of dollars are lost to song writers every month through the activity of song pluggers.

Through a Chicago printing house the songs are printed in sheets of one hundred songs for only a few cents, and are retailed from street corners for 10 cents. The sheet music is purchased in any music store and the printing house merely copies it, avoiding all payment of royalties.

The street hawker, with illegal printed copies, pays no royalty and no fee for sales permission. The penalty for the violation is a sentence of one year and a fine of $1,000.

Colds are increasing. In some sections Influenza is breaking out. Don't be alarmed, but don't be careless.

A cold is much easier avoided than cured! Do the sensible thing and adopt the ounce of prevention policy. Stay out of crowds as much as you can. Avoid coughers and sneezers. Dress warmly, keep your feet dry and sleep in a well-ventilated room.

Every morning and night take a tablet or two of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. This will keep the bowels open and combat infection by cold germs.

Millions know Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine as an excellent cold remedy, but not enough know it as an equally excellent preventive. Learn its efficacy and keep a package handy all winter long as your "safety first" measure.

If you have already caught cold there is nothing better you can take than Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It doesn't merely suppress the cold—it drives it completely out of the system. At the same time it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

For more than forty years Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine has been the standard cold and grippe tablet of the world, the formula keeping pace with Modern Medicine. Now in two sizes—30c and 50c. Circus Performers Have Busy Day Wiping Off Grease Paint

Casino Benefit More Successful than Backers Expected; Committee Meets Today.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MORE than one conventional member of society spent most of yesterday wiping off grease paint and returning children's pink hair ribbons or cowboys' ten gallon hats. Edward Wilson had one of the most difficult jobs.

For Mr. Wilson insisted upon appearing as Chief Mist in Your Eyes at the Casino's big country circus Saturday night and to achieve the correct effect he used most of the feathers and grease paint in town. He was one of a gay group of guests entertained by Earl Kribben at dinner and at the circus following. Others in the same party were Miss Martha Fitts, straight from the "east side" in her red and white plaid; Hal Noble, whom nobody recognized as a clown, for he had skillfully concealed his mustache; Miss Billy Semple, Miss Betty Scriven, and Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming Penn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer and the other members of the committee deserve gold medals for the hard work and long hours they put in arranging the big show. Mr. Cramer was unable to say yesterday how much the benefit had netted the Joint Emergency Relief fund, but he did say the party was successful beyond expectation. The amount will be known at a committee meeting today.

Shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday evening the Casino dining room, successfully transformed into a circus ring for the occasion, with patriotic bunting for its canopy, was crowded with dinner guests representing everything from Nero to Alice in Wonderland.

All Flock to Side Shows.

At 10 o'clock the side shows opened and every one flocked into the improvised booths to see Jane Rogers [Mrs. James W.] and Florence Senseney [Mrs. George T.] as mermaids, and Ben Fairbank, who was a perfect Chinese, work magic on Miss Mary Senior, the floating woman. Then there was the chamber of horrors where Lawrence Williams chopped off Shreve Badger's head by magic and Jack Cromlin performed weird antics as the tattooed man.

In still another corner Thomas Wheelock was discovered in the rôle of Lazy Lulu who wanted to be spilled out of bed. James Rogers caused the shivers to travel up and down the spine when he put in an appearance as a walking, talking human skeleton.

At midnight the big show came off as scheduled, with the members of the "Family Weigh" taking their bows in response to nothing less than an ovation, and John Winterbotham Jr. and Frank Breckinridge receiving the plaudits of the circus crowd for the "horse" act." Alfred P. Shaw was safely concealed as the front legs and Larray Larrabee as the back legs of the amazing animal. Then the Russian organ grinders from the Junior league's "Chauve Souris" with Miss Paula Wilms and the Countess Visconti di Madrone as the headliners, wound up the bill of entertainment.

Arthur Meeker made a vain attempt to keep order in the gay, noisy crowd in the clothes of a copper, while Mrs. Meeker roamed the "tent" in a sunbonnet and gingham dress. Lloyd Laflin was another policeman and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster boldly proclaimed "We Want Beer!" with a sign on the top of her bonnet.

George Artamonoff was a snake charmer, with everything from scorpions to crocodiles in his pocket, and Mrs. Byron S. Harvey, a domino. Mrs. Cornelius Crane, in spite of the strenuous afternoon she had assisting at the wedding of her sister-in-law, Miss Florence Crane, looked charming as a Turkish, or perhaps it was a Spanish,

Good Morning!

My, such a lot of Barrymores! At every turn of this production you, so to speak, step on a Barrymore!

Well, nice to see these members of stage and screendom's royal family, working together in such artistic accord, for, unquestionably, each gives a superb performance in a picture, that, though much too long, rather heavily handled and not always historically correct, is still a magnificent and sketchily informative spectacle.

Chief interest, of course, circles round Lionel's Rasputin. In this actor's hands the "black monk" becomes a fiend incarnate. Barrymore paints the lily in reverse and there is no good in the filthy, leering, lustful, cunning, mesmerizing dog he portrays in terrifically effective, though decidedly melodramatic fashion. Not quite a true picture, for with all his sins, Rasputin was, at core, a human sort of cuss with qualities that endeared—as he ensnared. There is not one winsome trait about the Barrymore Rasputin, and for this reason the characterization is not the powerful nor convincing one it might have been.

Miss Barrymore is regal as the empress and adorable as mother and wife. I hope she will look with favor upon herself in this screen venture and consent to play for us again. John Barrymore you'll like immensely as the handsome Prince Chegodieff, favorite at court and beloved of the czarina's lady-in-waiting, the Princess Natasha. Diana Wynyard! And is she beautiful! As an artiste she is, in my opinion, quite on a par with Ethel Barrymore. Interest quickens every time she enters a scene.

Ralph Morgan is splendid as the gentle, religious czar and Tad Alexander does a memorable bit of acting as the czarevitch. I wish I knew the name of the lovely little girl who plays the eldest of his three sisters. She impressed me.

The picture opens with a celebration and benediction in honor of the 300th anniversary of the Romanoffs. It is a gorgeous and impressive ceremonial that appears to bear the stamp of authenticity.

Events move interestingly—if slowly—toward the fall of the Romanoffs, which occurs not long after Prince Chegodieff disposes finally of Rasputin. Here's a scene to make the blood run cold. The old devil is as hard to kill as an octopus, and the scene of his slaying resembles a slaughter house as the priest and the prince engage in the battle that spells finis to an unholy career.

You will notice that this picture differs from current Russian movies in that it displays no sympathy at all for the revolutionists.

No expense has been spared in the matter of costumes or staging, nor did the director scrimp on "extras." There were many full dinner pails in Hollywood while "Rasputin and the Empress" was being made!

See you tomorrow!

London Paper Says Garbo Has Obtained U. S. Permit to Return

LONDON, Feb. 20.—[Monday.]—(AP)—News has been received here from Sweden that Greta Garbo, film actress, has obtained permission to return to the United States, the Mail said today. It is understood, the newspaper added, that Miss Garbo, who returned to Sweden last August, had considerable difficulty in getting the permit because of a recent action in Hollywood seeking to weed out foreign stars.

Greta Garbo left America with the simple announcement she was going "back to Sweden." Not long ago it was reported in reliable circles in Stockholm that the actress would soon return here. But she has been as secretive in Europe as she was in the United States.

Army Relief Society a True Friend in Need

Benefits from Army Ball on Wednesday.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

When medals and family jewels mingle next Wednesday evening at the ball Maj. Gen. Frank Parker and Mrs. Parker and all of the officers of the regular army and their ladies are giving in the Army and Navy club at the Lake Shore Athletic Club building, another aviator's widow, another lieutenant's orphan left penniless by sudden misfortune, will be assured of a chance in life.

The Army Relief society—that friend in need by deeds and not palaver—is to benefit by the proceeds of this card party and dance which promises to be one of the brilliant affairs of the winter season—brilliant because of the medals and family gems and brilliant, too, because it will be the first Army ball Chicago has known since before the war.

Not for two decades has there been a receiving line composed of the ranking generals and their wives, a grand march with every man placed according to his official importance, a ball, most of all, that has started at the appointed hour and ended at the stroke of 12:30. The handsomest aids of the Sixth corps area will assist and during the evening there will be special dances known only in army circles, among them the John Paul Jones.

It is $1 that Maj. Gen. Parker and the other army officers are asking for a ticket to their party—a small sum for such brilliancy, but they hope it will mean a sizable sum for that essential cause which involves the very honor of the republic.

"'As one friend to another.' That is the spirit and that the procedure of the Army Relief society," James O'Donnell Bennett explained more than two years ago.

This is still the spirit today, even more emphasized perhaps than before. With little or no overhead and no elaborate machinery, the society meets emergencies promptly, unobtrusively, and with tenderness in its mission. Last year and the year before it gave more than $100,000 to lighten the pressing burdens and relieve the old age anxieties of the widows of officers and enlisted men of the United States army and to educate their children.

Its keynote is emergency. Red tape is disregarded for the sake of immediate action. Frequently bills are paid by telegraph or a railroad ticket is purchased by wireless for the widow of a soldier left stranded by death. Take this case for instance:

He was a young aviator, trained yet careless. The day after his baby was born he went up and crashed. He died the second day following, leaving not a penny.

The wife and the baby were in a hospital near the field. Her family and his family lived in remote cities and neither was well to do. "What can I do?" she pleaded.

The Army Relief society came to the rescue. As friend to friend it paid the stricken widow's hospital bill, bought a railroad ticket to her home, and packed her little store of household goods. The bill came to approximately $500.

Nor was the young widow forgotten when she reached home. For six months her tuition in a secretarial school was paid. After this she obtained a position and in the course of two years was earning $125 a month. Then it was her request that her relief money, which was $75 a month, be transferred to another widow.

This is only one case. There are hundreds all proving that the Relief society is saving the unfortunate from dire need, putting them on an earning basis, and giving their children a chance in life, a chance to pursue a special aptitude if they have one.

Black-White Costumes Get Place in Sun

BY RHEA SEEGER.

If, and we say if, with a very large and capital I. . . If you can find will power to keep away from the hat collections that practically keep all females in a strange and silent spell, you will find some equally startling and even sensational things among the black and white combines. While clouds of blue threaten to envelope every spring fashion showing, these good old black and white combines are still something to cheer about. You may wrap blue, grey and brown costumes around your sylph-like shape and enjoy them for quite some time, but the things your really swank about in are the dramatic get-togethers that splash a bit of white against black with knowing artistry.

Have you seen black jersey this season . . . a new-old friend that has acquired a very desirable dull sleekness and this year the bulging propensities of jersey seem well controlled. Black jersey frocks used to remind you of sad little orphans, but now you buy them with trimmings of white pique, fetching little creations that are the talk of the town . . . look for the model that has long unpuffed sleeves with swanky cavalier cuffs that flare a trifle below the elbow. These cuffs are lined with white pique that extends a good inch beyond the edge of the black jersey cuff. The collar wanders into a wrap a round sash and that too, is outlined with white pique.

A suit that makes you gasp with appreciation of its classic simplicity is another black beauty accented with white. The coat is fitted expertly around the ribs, waistline and collar . . . the yoke dips a trifle in the mid-back section and curves toward the shoulders . . . the usual small tailored collar has been left on the cutting room floor, so the demure high round neckline makes you as youthful as you are.

Down the front, to the very edge of the coat, is a white pique vest effect . . . you look like you are wearing one of those frightfully smart vests, but it is a mere optical illusion, for the lucky owner can remove this vest section for other ideas to contrast the black crinkled, unusual wool fabric. A flat tailored white pique bow ties under your chin, being the long tails of the vest.

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess is marooned in a sailboat on Peconic Bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville. His companion, Israella Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new-made fortune, known as "Nosey Ingy," rows to town and sends Bart help and taxies home. A girl in a canoe invites Bart over to her family's island. Bart learns that she is one of the Bayleys, who have lived in seclusion on the island fifteen years. The father travels. He invites the girl, Alice, to visit him in Wyattville. Less than a week later Trevor Burgess, Bart's father, dies suddenly from a heart attack. He confesses in a letter left for Bart to being a bigamist. The Bayleys of Folly Island are his second family. They know him as Matthew Bayley. He asks Bart, for his invalid mother's sake, to guard the secret, and leaves a fortune to provide for the Bayleys. Bart calls on Mrs. Bayley, posing as a lawyer, and finds her a lovely woman, not the harridan he expected. Bart is happy to learn from her mother that Alice isn't Matthew Bayley's daughter. But to keep her from visiting his home and seeing his father's pictures is now a problem. When Bart realizes he loves Alice he resolves to stay away from Folly Island. He sees a lot of Lora Sackett, a distant relative and recent divorcee, and soon finds himself unexpectedly engaged. The Bayleys visit New York, and Bart sees them. Ingy Warren has been visiting the island and has invited Alice to Wyattville. Bart tells Alice of his engagement. Ben Love, an eel catcher, long employed by the Bayleys, tries blackmail when he sees their newly acquired affluence.

INSTALLMENT XXXI.

WEDDING PLANS.

In the small white sitting room at the back of the big house Bart found his mother and Aunt Augusta, heads together. The way they jumped apart at his appearance assured him that he had been under discussion. Hero bounced down from Miss Forrester's steeply sloping lap, barked a string of falsetto oaths and hid under a davenport.

"Don't be afraid, dear," chided Aunt Augusta's measured voice. "It's only Bart. Hero knows everybody by name."

"Bright of him," smiled Bart. He went over and kissed his mother, whereupon Aunt Augusta surged out of the room. Affectionate demonstrations were to her indelicate, and the retreating Hero echoed her prejudice.

"Well, darling," began Bart, pumping up a hearty manner as he sat beside his mother and held her thin hand. "I hope I didn't bust into a plot between you two girls."

She just sat there, looking into him, through him.

"Bart, is there something—you seem depressed lately."

"How'd you get that way, mother? I'm fine. Fine as silk." He sat up very straight and glowed in her face.

"On my word!" she cried, "'here comes the man who owns me by right of conquest."

"Darling, is it something about Lora?"

"Well, what about her?" He decided to bluster, yet was a little ashamed of bullying his mother. "She isn't wasting away or anything. I don't know what you mean."

"Bart, please don't." The frailty of her voice disarmed him.

"Sorry, mother. Please forgive me. I've had my nose in the desk all day, that's why."

"You shouldn't work so hard, my dear." Mrs. Burgess' formula, founded on a sweet ignorance of what work means to men. "You'll have plenty of time for work after you're——" Her words trailed away, then she spoke her thought. "Don't you think you'll both be happier if you're married pretty soon?"

This was the consent he had been waiting for.

"Mother!" He pressed her hand. "Long engagements aren't good for people. They get on everybody's nerves."

"Yes." Her look was so loving, so fragile, so dependent on him, that he cried out:

"It's no time for me to leave you alone, mother."

"You've taken the Stanley house, haven't you? And that's just down the road." Almost feverishly. "And you'll see me every day—after you get back from your trip."

"Yes, I'll want to do that, mother."

"Lora and I are going to be such good friends. It isn't as if you were marrying a stranger. The Linds are our sort. Edith and I have always been so close. And Lora's improved enormously, now that she's going to settle down."

Again he had the feeling of his mother treading on dangerous ground, quite oblivious of where she was going.

"Lora's a swell girl, mother," he said. "It's hard for anybody on the outside—even you—to know how we understand each other. Please don't let Aunt Augusta put notions in your head."

"It's all right, if you're in love with her."

"You don't think I'd want to marry a girl unless I were."

Her eyes dwelt fondly upon her only son.

"Have you and Lora set any date for the wedding?"

"You and I talked that over," he said, and was sulky in spite of himself. "We agreed, didn't we, that it would be better to wait until spring? Lora was very sensible about it. She can be sensible, you know."

"Yes." But her eyes were still on him. "You're both being very considerate of me. But, Bart——" Mother pursed her fine little mouth, as she did when there were decisions to be made. "I think long engagements are silly and unfair. Your father's family wanted us to be engaged for a year. But he made a terrible row about it and he had his way. I've always been glad that we didn't wait until—the best part died. And I think it would be better," she said, calmly, "if you set a date pretty soon. It would have to be a quiet little wedding.

"O, Lora wouldn't mind that." The words plunged from him. Get it over with, have something settled!

"I know your father wouldn't like putting things off." Trevor Burgess might have been in the next room, waiting with his approval.

"It's lovely of you, mother," Bart said.

But he let three days slip by, then came upon her casually, poking fun at a number of young men on the Country club veranda. Ingy Warren was at least, lurking in the background, his manner modestly proclaiming: "Here's another girl I can take or leave, just as I feel like. Lora, in bright pink, tilted a tall glass and sucked some yellow liquid through a straw. The straw matched a glint of hair under her funny little hat.

"On my word!" she cried. "Here comes the man who owns me by right of conquest."

The collection of boys laughed. Bart laughed. Ingy Warren laughed. "Freddie, get up and give my boss a seat," she commanded. "Sit right here, pie, and drink the rest of my lemonade. It's horribly sour and you look hot." Fondly she shoved the glass toward him and gave him an extra straw.

Then the young men gradually scattered, mentioning foursomes and handicaps. Plainly enough they were leaving the lovers to themselves. Ingy Warren was the last.

"See you at the Taylors tonight?" he asked.

"No, precious lamb. I'm going to have a headache tonight. A bad headache."

"Oodles!" The many bracelets along her arm clinked like castanets as she waved him a light adieu.

"Well, great traveler." She had turned on Bart soft gazelle eyes. "If I work in an office and wasn't on the job any more than you are they'd can me in a week."

"I'm never anything but," he objected.

"But what?" I rang you up twice this week and you were about as much there as I'm a Greek."

"What days did you ring me up?"

She thought a moment. "Wednesday and Thursday."

"I had to go to Pittsburgh."

"O, that's what you call it now."

"I don't get you." He flushed angrily. Was she trying to pick a quarrel with him? Well, if she wanted to break it off, that was all right, too."

"Please don't, Bart." Her voice was unexpectedly soft.

"Don't what?"

"Be sore at me. If I bother you at your office, ringing you up, I'm sorry——"

"Lora, dear, it doesn't bother me. But I was trying to tell you——"

Girl Wonders if She Can Forget 5 Year Romance

BY DORIS BLAKE.

It is serious business trying to decide whether to hang on to the bird in hand," or go hunting for more promising game. And a problem confronting no end of girls at the moment.

"Vi's" is a case in point. She's been going pretty steadily with a man for five years. She admits caring for him so much that every other man suffers in comparison. And he, obviously, loves her. But the man tells "Vi" he is not in a financial position to marry, and will not be for some time to come, as his business appears now.

They're neither very young. The girl realizes these are her best years. She's not an optimist about an early financial recovery.

The girl wonders if it is possible to get over a five year friendship such as she has known with the now depressed suitor.

The chances are that a girl who'd stop to ask if one could ever get over a beautiful friendship would not get over it.

It's difficult to be sentimental in the face of today's realities. It is important to a girl that she marry in her best years.

Waiting never was a commended measure with two people who have reached mature age of reason. With the added wear and tear on nerves an unsuccessful business must contribute, a long engagement becomes even more perilous. Men must realize that a compromise with existing conditions must be made. If the girl is willing to throw in her lot on the gamble—he deserves to lose her if he remains stubborn to her plea.

MINUTE MYSTERY

CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

(Copyright, 1933, By The Chicago Tribune.)

DEATH CLOSES THE DEAL.

As Dr. Lyman looked into the face of John Bay, lying flat on the floor near the window, he mentally noted the wide open, staring eyes—the only sign of violence—and the outflung arms at right angles to the body. The professor stood silently by.

"The two bullets are still in the body, Fordney. I'll have to probe for them at the morgue," said Lyman after his examination.

"H-m-m-m? What? Yes—yes—" Fordney answered absent-mindedly as he turned his gaze from the blood-stains on the rug where the man had lain.

"John and I were alone, discussing a business deal," Cole explained, "when we saw a man on the fire escape outside the window. As the success of our deal depended on the utmost secrecy, John rushed at the inquisitive stranger, but before he reached him the masked intruder shot him twice through the opened window and escaped."

"Disturb anything?" inquired the professor.

"Nothing."

The chair in which John had been sitting was overturned and his cigaret had burned a hole in the carpet. Fordney pocketed another stub of the same brand which lay on the window sill.

Dorsey Owings, occupying the next office, stated that he heard three shots.

"That is right," offered Cole. "I fired at the intruder, but missed him. My revolver is over there on the desk."

"Sergeant," called Fordney quietly, "make a thorough search for the gun that killed Bay. Or perhaps, Cole, you'll tell me what you did with it—you murdered him!"

WHY DID FORDNEY ACCUSE COLE?

Chevalier Asks to Adopt Baby Used in Movie

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Maurice Chevalier, who mentioned childlessness as one of the reasons for the break which preceded his recent divorce from Yvonne Vallee, wanted to adopt the ten month old infant Leroy Winebrenner, who plays with the Frenchman in his current film, "A Bedtime Story."

The mother, who has lost her husband, debated the matter for several days. Then she decided, in spite of the advantages in the way of education and luxurious upbringing which being adopted by Chevalier might mean, that the chubby little yellow haired fellow whom the actor calls "Monsieur Baby," was too dear to her; and all adoption steps are off.

But Mrs. Winebrenner certainly thinks Chevalier is a great friend and it is a cinch that the little boy will have an autographed photo of a certain French actor standing on his bedroom bureau as long as his mother keeps house for him.

Radio Pictures plans a simultaneous east and west coast world premiere for its thriller, "King Kong," at Radio City and the Hollywood Chinese theater.

While Radio Pictures was producing "King Kong," some language was needed for the savage natives to speak, and Ruth Rose (Mrs. Merian Cooper) wife of the film's producer, and herself one of its two adopters, invented a series of grunts, gutturals, and gibberish. Its quite effective in the film as ran off by Noble Johnson, fine colored actor, and the other tomtom beaters and spear brandishers. You sit in your seat and imagine you can translate just what they're yelling.

But now comes along the Will Hays' organization, with a demand that Radio supply the offices of the producers' association with a literal translation of all the words and cries uttered by the savages in the film. And it struck Mrs. Cooper as the chance for a great joke which she may or may not formally carry through to think up a translation of the gibberish she invented and supply it to Mr. Hays and the women's clubs.

Harold Grieve, interior decorator, lost a lawsuit in which he and his wife, Jetta Goudal, sought $1,130 from Laura Hope Crews, the veteran actress and voice coach. It was an unusual lawsuit. Miss Crews admitting she had bought $9,000 worth of furniture from the Grieves, of which she had paid all but $34, but denying that she had engaged Grieve's personal services as an interior decorator. Miss Goudal testified her husband worked for hours at Miss Crews' home, but Judge Alfred Paonessa decided that if Grieve couldn't show a contract—which he could not—he couldn't award the $1,130.

When MGM tried to release "Cuban Love Song" in France the film corporation was informed that the song of the United States marines, "From the Halls of Montezuma," was from Offenbach's comic opera, "Genevieve de Brabant," 1869, and was covered by copyright laws in France, and accordingly couldn't be sung by Lawrence Tibbett in a film version released in that country unless permission of the copyright right holders were secured. Similar complications came up in Italy and Portugal.

dancer. Then there were Miss Louise Brewer and Miss Jane Schuttler in blue and white striped overalls. Miss Paula Uihlein as a Hungarian barmaid, the Madiener twins, Otto and William, in beer suits that were exact duplicates, and Miss Betty Brawley impersonating a Russian bareback rider.

Others observed around the sawdust ring were Miss Elisabeth McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. I. Newton Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Faurot Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Laflin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Bissell, Howard Gillette, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ranney, and Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank.

Eleanor Dennehy Engagement Told.

Society is interested this morning in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Dennehy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy of 1439 State parkway, to Ralph Nelson Isham, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. George Snow Isham.

Though no definite plans have been made for her wedding, Miss Dennehy expects to add her name to the list of spring brides.

One of the youngest of Mr. and Mrs. Dennehy's seven attractive children, Miss Eleanor was a popular debutante of her season. Since that time she has taken an active interest in a number of the city's philanthropies, among them the Children's Memorial hospital.

It was scarcely a year ago that she was in the wedding party of her sister, Josephine, who became the bride of Prince Nicholas Galitzine in Pasadena.

Mr. Isham, a well known aviator, who used to commute from Lake Geneva to Chicago by plane, is a scion of one of Chicago's pioneer families. His grandfather, Dr. George Isham, came here in 1855 and his maternal grandfather was the late Henry H. Porter. The late Dr. George Snow Isham and Mrs. Katherine Porter Isham were his parents.

After the death of his parents several years ago and the marriage of his sister, the former Helen Isham, to Lucius Hill of Boston, Mr. Isham left the family residence at 1340 State parkway to take an apartment at 70 East Cedar street, where he now lives. In 1924 he was graduated from Yale. He is a member of the Chicago, University, Saddle and Cycle, and Onwentsia Country clubs.

This week-end Mr. Isham and his fiancée were guests at a house party given for them by Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Isham at their Lake Geneva home.

Col. Lasaref Is Engaged.

Chicago friends of Col. Michel Lasaref have received word from him at Nice, France, that he is engaged to Mme. Sophie Vaho, daughter of Gen. Sherbartchoff, Russian war hero. Col. Lasaref, a Russian, has been living in Nice for nearly a year and Mme. Vaho is also living there. He came to Chicago shortly after the close of the world war and made many friends here. For a time he was secretary to Harold F. McCormick.

Invitations have already been received to the dinner dance on Friday, March 3, that is being given for the benefit of the Russian Fund for War Disabled and the committee in charge is upset because it is not stated on the invitations that the price of the tickets, $2.50 each, includes everything. Some recipients were afraid that the ticket was for admission only and that dinner would be extra, so Princess Josephine Galitzine asked us to announce that dinner is included. The party, which no doubt will be one of the gayest of the season, will be at the Maisonette Russe at 2800 Sheridan road.

Arrange Parties for Benefit Opera.

Arthur Wheeler is to be dinner host to a party of five Wednesday evening preceding the performance of "Tosca" in the old Auditorium. Mr. Wheeler's guests will be Mr. and Mrs. James C. Ames, Mrs. Eugene Wheeler, Mrs. Robert C. Wheeler, and Miss Winifred Wheeler.

Another party that will occupy a box in the gold horseshoe Wednesday night will be that of Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell, who is one of the active members of the Presbyterian woman's board sponsoring the "Tosca" performances. Mrs. Haskell will have as her guests Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Carton, Arthur Heun, her brother, Robert E. Ross, and Mrs. John W. Cary, who shares her philanthropic interest as head of the woman's board of St. Luke's hospital.

Still a third box Wednesday night will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William W. Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Renshaw, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. White.

Several of the city's finest private art collections are to be represented this summer in the brilliant display of nineteenth century French paintings the Art institute will show during A Century of Progress. Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer have promised to loan their still life composition by Monet, a painting of dead pheasants noted for its blending of silvery whites, as well as a famous painting by Degas. Another Degas will come from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick. Mrs. Robert R. McCormick is giving for exhibit a figure composition by Cezanne, "The Bathers."

"Serious Minded" Meetings Today.

Two "serious minded" meetings on today's calendar are the luncheon of the Lake Shore League of Women Voters this noon at the Drake hotel and the tea the distinguished guest committee of the Woman's City club is giving this afternoon for Miss Marion Talbot, dean of women at the University of Chicago.

The league has invited its members and guests—this is to be an open meeting—to help themselves to a buffet luncheon in the Lantern room of the Drake hotel and then move on to the French room to hear Dr. Rachel S. Yarros and Miss Grace E. Benjamin speak on women and juvenile delinquents in the Women's court. Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter will preside.

Mrs. Tiffany Blake will introduce Miss Talbot at the Woman's City club tea since she is the chairman of the club's distinguished guest committee. Miss Talbot, who spent last year in Turkey, has consented to tell something about the life of Turkish women. Presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mrs. Robert B. Gregory, Mrs. Edmund J. Doering, Mrs. R. Bruce Malcolm, Mrs. George G. Bogert, Mrs. George B. McKibbin, and Mrs. Herbert F. Perkins.

Olivet Institute Holds Election.

For another year Evan Evans will head the board of directors of Olivet institute. Edwin T. Maynard has been elected to assist him as vice president and Fielding Marshall, a new board member, as secretary. Francis H. Beidler will handle the finances.

At the annual meeting it was reported that the settlement at 1441 Cleveland avenue had taken care of 320,493 perons during the last year. This compares with an attendance of 228,404 persons in 1931. A total of 11,970 meals were served to school children during 1932 as well.

Large funds were raised for the support of Olivet last fall by the benefit performances of "When Chicago Was Young" and the year before by the "Tableaux Vivants" arranged by Mrs. Howard Linn. Harold F. McCormick heads the Olivet board of trustees.

A benefit party is to take place Thursday and it will be a very exclusive one with about ninety people assembling in the Racquet club for an informal buffet supper. The profits will go toward a day nursery that the Martha Etter crèche is establishing at 1601 North Marshfield avenue. Mrs. Blair Bagley is president of the crèche, and Mrs. Louis G. Buss is in charge of the party.

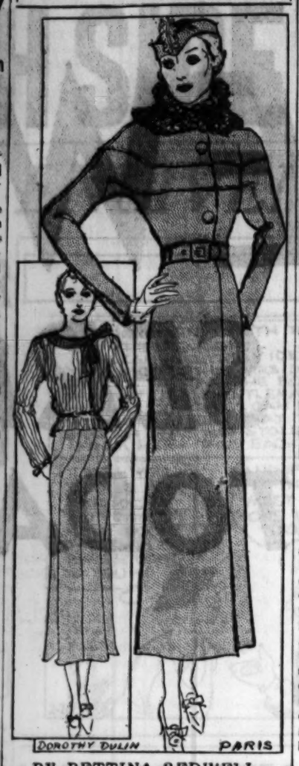
Lelong Sponsors Olive Green Outfit for Young Blonde



BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS. — [Special.] — Practical clothes for the teens and the twenties are saying their style message in color and material this spring. Rough stuff goes as to fabric, and gentle, sweet color as to the tone. The combination of light blue with rough wool is one made to order for the teens, and Paris okays it in big letters.

Lucien Lelong designs a practical outfit shown today, for the early twenties of blonde persuasion that is a knockout. The coat is made of rough woolen in a bright olive green. If you are blonde you don't do your self justice unless you wear this color once in a while. The line of the coat is straight from below the arms. A cloth belt with a brown buckle hold it in at the waistline. The shoulders are made important by the dropped shoulder yoke in two sections, the lower being cut in one piece with the bands down the outside of the sleeves.

The skirt, sketched in the back ground, is made of the same olive green cloth as the coat. Its seven gores slant from the waistline to the hips.

The sweater blouse is hand knitted and is brown to match the coat collar. The round neckline, the cuffs, and the belt are bordered with green knitted edging. There is a tiny round yoke and bow crocheted in filet pattern.

BY MARY MEADE.

A bad habit we hustling food artists sometimes get into is that of forgetting to say good-by to old friends until after they are gone. Tangerines, for instance, have been flirting with us every since Thanksgiving, when they came in like a symbol of the holidays to stay on through Christmas and New Year's and leave us the first of March.

But two weeks of the tangerine season are still left—plenty of time to catch up on some of the tangy treats we may have missed and to get acquainted with tangerine possibilities for next year if we have so far only a bowing acquaintance with them.

Tangerines, if you have never looked up their family tree, are cousins to the orange and other citrus fruits. Centuries ago they were cultivated by the mandarins of China and the nobles of Japan as the nobility of the citrus family. Even the name has its aristocratic slant, for the family name "mandarin" was given them because they were the fruit of the rich and only within reach of nobility.

But today, luckily for our modest food budgets and epicurean tastes, these queens of the citrus fruits are being sent us from Florida in such numbers that they can be enjoyed as every day treats as long as the season lasts.

Tangerines as a rule have a somewhat sweeter juice than oranges. The skins are thinner and less firm and the membranes are likely to be fairly tenacious.

First a suggestion for one of the best little cocktails I know. It calls for equal parts of tomato juice and tangerine juice, expressed just as you would orange juice. Combine the two, add a few drops of lemon juice, and a sprinkling of salt and sugar if desired. Serve chilled as a tangy appetizer for a roast meat dinner.

Or consider salads. If you're in too much of a hustle to coax out the membranes, simply peel the tangerines and slice crosswise in thin slices. Serve on crisp water cress or lettuce and top with French dressing.

Next a dessert that can't go out of style because it's as delectable with oranges as with tangerines. It calls for the following recipe:

TANGERINE COCOANUT SALAD—AMBROSIA STYLE.

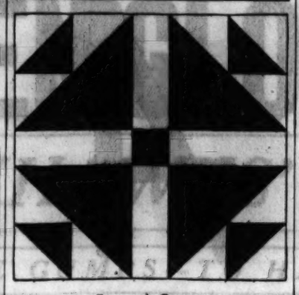
2-3 cup strained honey
1 cup shredded cocoanut

Skin the fruit, removing the membrane down to the pulp. Slice crosswise in medium-thin slices and then cut each slice in half. Dip the half slices in the honey and then in the shredded cocoanut. Arrange pleasingly on crisp lettuce and serve with whipped cream mayonnaise as a salad dessert.

Mary Meade's new recipe cabinet, an indexed card file of 133 selected and tested recipes, is now on sale at THE TRIBUNE Public Service Offices at One South Dearborn and in TRIBUNE Tower Lobby. Price, 25 cents. To order by mail, send 33 cents in stamps or money order to Mary Meade, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

Triangular Fox, Geese Seen in Interesting Quilt



Fox and Geese.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Triangles have long been the symbol by which the many bird designs in quilt patterns have been expressed. Triangles in different sizes and arrangements make the various bird patterns. Just last week we published—and we hope you saved—"Birds in the Air."

In today's design, "Fox and Geese," the geese are easily distinguishable and a mighty stretch of the imagination will label the larger triangles Reynard the Fox. Another title, "Hen and Chickens," is every bit as well known and perhaps even more logical.

For a pattern of the "Fox and Geese" design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at The Tribune Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street.

Self Knowledge Vital if You'd Help Your Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

This week I am going to give the column over to mothers whose contributions seem to me to be of special interest.

"As a parent and a student of parent problems and as an observer of other parents," writes one mother, "I am convinced that there is one stumbling block common to us all, and unless we remove it little progress can be made toward our goal of successful parenthood.

"That stumbling block is, of course, the inadequacy of our own personal adjustment to life, manifested in nervousness, scolding, laziness, fussiness, nagging or other undesirable traits. Obviously we cannot help our children to attain the right disposition unless we first understand our own shortcomings and learn how to remedy them, at least to a degree.

"If you, as a parent, have already recognized your own inner conflicts and maladjustments and are working intelligently and earnestly to straighten them out you have made the first step toward helping your child develop into a happy and useful human being. On the other hand, to assume that you yourself are quite all right and that your child's faults are incomprehensible—'must come from the other side of the family,' etc.—is to assure failure in dealing with your child.

"The parent who finds his child unresponsive or annoying [and what parent doesn't, at least occasionally have this experience?] should look well to his own conduct and examine his own thoughts and feelings. Wherein have I failed to help my child develop this much to be desired quality, the lack of which causes him to have what I and others call faults and bad habits?

"Then having discovered what's wrong with yourself, and making the necessary change of attitude, you are ready to work with your child toward a happier and better way of living."

Keep Smiling to Retain Job, Girls Advised

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

It's safer, it seems, for a business girl to polish up her smile and turn it loose on the office manager as a method of keeping her job, than it is to polish up her ability in that job. For a good disposition these days counts more than a speed record at shorthand or typing, or knowing how many ts to use in "benefited."

That's just one phase of the effect the depression has had on their economic group, 300 business girls from cities and towns in northern Illinois and Wisconsin heard yesterday at the midwinter conference yesterday at the Harriet Hammond McCormick Memorial Y. W. C. A., Dearborn and Oak streets. The report that incorporated it with other findings was a major feature of the conference, and was compiled by a committee headed by Esther Weidhammer, business girls' secretary of the Chicago Y. W. C. A.

Economically the business girl has taken some hard bumps during the depression, the committee found, but socially it has awakened a sense of responsibility toward other girls to the extent that those still receiving salaries share freely with those who are not, whether or not they are friends. Many instances are on record currently, it was stated, where unemployed girls are able to remain at the "Y" residences because other girls are footing their expenses.

"The attitude toward work is changing," Miss Weidhammer's committee states. "Girls are forced to take any job at a great sacrifice of special ability and skill. In the Y. W. C. A. clubs there are many former business girls now doing housework. Private secretaries are waiting on table. Comptometer operators are working at soda fountains. These changes mean a loss of interest in work. The pride of craftsmanship is gone, for wholesale firing makes girls feel that good work doesn't count.

"The business girl's attitude toward money is changing. She used to conceal the amount of her salary unless it was $35 or more a week. She used to boast of wearing $14 shoes. Now if she appears in a new dress among friends she apologizes, 'Yes, but it cost only $1.88.'

"Business girls used to be known for their good grooming. Now permanent waves are a rarity and finger waves are strictly home made. Hair straggles down from heads that used to be immaculately and expensively cared for. This sounds superficial, but is not. It indicates a profound change in the business girl's psychology.

"In the family circle the business girl is being swung into a new position. Where she used to be the pampered, carefree member of the household, now she is often the breadwinner. Salaries that used to go for permanent waves now buy coal for the home folks. This financial power places a young girl in an unusual place in the family. One girl said, 'My mother never calls me down any more. I'm the important one in our family.'"

Mrs. Ida Winston Sarvay, executive secretary of the Chicago Y. W. C. A., pointed out that the findings of the report may help to bring about a closer organization among business girls that will work to their advantage in various ways. The sentiment is growing among them, she added, that the industrial girl has suffered less during the economic slump because she is older and wiser in the manner of obtaining mutual protection through union with her fellow workers.

Beautiful Shoulders Create Air of Feminine Ease and Grace

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Look what they did with their waistlines, their ankles, their hair!

Now, watch what they're going to do about their shoulders! It took some time for the experts to find out just what was wrong with an otherwise perfect dear. The girl who seemed to have everything, yet, somehow, didn't manage to put herself across. Just why did the Latin sister work up a great personality case for herself, often with fewer straight pulchritude counts than our women?

Well, the secret is out! And where you t'ink it lies? In the shoulders!

That vague something known as style, personality, grace can now be traced right to its lair—the shoulders. If they're rigid and set, if they're tense, tight or rounded from careless holding—you're not to apply for a job as model, dance partner or as a success at all where beauty enters into the scheme.

There's good sense to the decision, too. A woman shouldn't be admitted to select beauty circles until she has learned to manage gracefully this feature and—in evening clothes—much featured part of her anatomy. The dance floor is where you see beautiful shoulders at their greatest beauty. And where the phenomenon occurs you not how free and easy are said shoulders and in what perfect rhythm they move with the rest of ther body.

Not that shoulder beauty is limited to the dance floor. Your day dress, suit, coat depend much upon the way shoulders are held for costume success. If the shoulders are stiff, or drooped or hunched—certainly you, the lady, aren't going to create the same "air" of easy elegance you will with shoulders that are borne with an easy freedom.

Check up on yours today—and tomorrow I'll tell you what you may do to get more of the wanted style into them.

Horowitz No Longer Mere Piano Marvel

BY EDWARD MOORE.

It is about time to stop thinking about Vladimir Horowitz as a young Siegfried of the piano keyboard exultantly slaying all the dragons of technic. Not that he has lost the slightest trace of his exciting ability in that direction, but his recital at Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon showed him as something more, as a musician who has matured until he deserves earnest and respectful attention.

At that, even with every intention of taking his extraordinary powers for granted, he still maintains something that the others do not possess. Only a young superman could have played Liszt's arrangement of Saint-Saëns' "Danse Macabre" so overwhelmingly, and only such an overwhelming performance could have made the piece as amusing as it was.

But there were other things, among them a magnificent performance of the Bach Toccata in C, as rewritten by Busoni. It seems to be a new piece for pianists in this part of the world. In fact, that is the great advantage of having a set of fingers that stop at nothing, like those of Mr. Horowitz. He ventures out and brings back fresh items to consider, works that have not been played and replayed. He added to his services yesterday by playing Ravel's "Scarbo," which is Ravel at the most characteristic, and a charming "Pastourelle" by Poulenc, both of which had the merit of unfamiliar interest.

Another concert called me away from Orchestra hall for a time, but there is reliable information to the effect that Mr. Horowitz's performances of the Beethoven Sonata, opus 101, also of Schumann's Arabesque and Toccata, were those of a wise, serious, and resourceful musician, and that he was thereby a notable interpreter as well as, in other parts of his program, the most skilled juggler of difficult notes on the concert platform today.

A change in the customary order of chamber music in the series at the Chicago Woman's club theater yesterday afternoon brought a joint recital by Estelle Hughes Felber, soprano, and Herman Felber Jr., violinist. Both are ambitious and well trained musicians and excellent interpreters.

A communication from Hamilton Gibson, president of the Chicago North Shore Festival association, states that the May festival in Evanston will be abandoned this year, although the chorus has been under rehearsals for a number of weeks.

Solve the Puzzle and Name The Seal of the State

Each day, beginning today, a Crossword Puzzle containing the official seal of one of the States of the 48 States of the United States will be printed in the Tribune. You are invited to solve these puzzles and name the seal of the State which appears in each one.

The Chicago Tribune will pay 179 big cash prizes totaling $2,500.00 to the persons who send in the best answers to this series. There are no strings or catches to this offer. No hard work to do. No subscriptions to solicit. Just pleasant, educational pastime and an opportunity to win a substantial reward.

Just Follow These Simple Rules:

ELIGIBILITY: Every man, woman, boy and girl is eligible regardless of place of residence—excepting employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing.

WHAT TO DO: Solve the series of Crossword Puzzles appearing in the Chicago Daily Tribune. A new puzzle will appear each day, excepting Sundays, until 48 have appeared. The official seal and name of one of the 48 States of the United States will appear in each puzzle. Solve the puzzles and write the name of the State below each puzzle.

DRAMATIZATIONS: Each evening, excepting Saturdays, W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune Station, will broadcast a dramatization of the State whose seal appears in the puzzle the following morning in the Tribune. Tune in. These dramatizations will furnish clues to help you.

WHERE TO SEND ENTRIES: Hold all puzzles until you have the complete set of 48. Then send them to "State Seals," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1718, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be in by midnight 15 days after Puzzle No. 48 has been printed. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, Postage Prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department.

THE AWARDS: The Chicago Tribune will pay 179 cash prizes totaling $2,500.00 to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of puzzles in accordance with these rules. You do not necessarily have to solve each of the 48 puzzles correctly to win. The prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest. Elaborate entries are not necessary and will receive no greater consideration than simple ones. Therefore, make your entry simple and neat. (See Prize List below.)

JUDGING: All entries will be judged by a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Entrants agree to accept their decision as final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

FREE: It is not necessary to buy the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the puzzles and send them in. The Chicago Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The Blackhawks and the Montreal Maroons played themselves a scoreless tie in the presence of 9,000 at the Chicago Stadium last night, but it was not the conventional 0-0 contest—not by two rousing fist fights, one of them approaching a riot; ten penalties, five of them majors, and the most expert exhibition by an enemy goal keeper against the Hawks this semester.

Since the red light failed to blink all evening, the highlights of the game resolved themselves into the story of the impromptu bouts on the program. Any argument that hockey is getting to be a sissies' game, with none of the old belligerency of yore, was dissipated before the second period started. Roger Jenkins of the Hawks and Archie Wilcox of the Maroons appeared in the preliminary which went about three rapid rounds before it was ruled a draw and both were sent away with major penalties.

It's a Free-for-All.

The whine of the siren ending the first period had hardly faded before one of the most rambunctious scrimmages ever witnessed on Chicago ice broke out. Everybody except Manager Gorman of the Hawks and Eddie Gerard, the Maroons' pilot, appeared to be involved in it. After the boys were unraveled it was revealed that Pudge Mackenzie of the Hawks and Dave Trottier of Montreal had tried to have a small duel of their own without any interference. Then Lionel Conacher, the Jim Thorpe of Canada, injected himself into the argument. It is known that no man in the National Hockey league cares to choose Mr. Conacher, a fact borne out by a handsome shiner administered to Mackenzie. All three were given major penalties.

Kerr Stops Plenty.

The aforementioned goalkeeper who made even the Hawk fans like him is Dave Kerr, the 23 year old rookie, who is imminently responsible for the Maroons' present position in the league. He made 47 stops against Gardiner's 31. He made those stops with everything but his head, and that came near detaining a couple of high ones.

No penalties were recorded until Wilcox and Jenkins came to blows near the Montreal goal after 10 minutes. They were pried apart and granted major penalties. A few minutes later Couture was banished for tripping Smith.

The siren ending the first period had no sooner sounded than the greatest disturbance of the season on the Stadium ice ensued, with ushers, players and a policeman involved. After gloves, sticks and fragments of uniforms had been picked up and sorted out, it was revealed that the principals in the argument were Mackenzie and Trottier. So congested was the crowd about them on the ice that a blow by blow story is unavailable, but both were ordered to start serving major penalties at the opening of the second period.

Conacher, Jenkins Also Chased.

So confusing was the brawl at the end of the first period that it was not completely cleared up until the opening of the second when it developed that Conacher and Jenkins also were miscreants. Conacher was given a major and Jenkins a minor.

The first ten minutes of the second period following the serving of four sentences were singularly free of pugilistic demonstrations, the only misdemeanor being a tripping charge by Brydson, who came down in a heap with Gottseling against the boards.

After Jenkins had concluded his two minutes in the bastile, it was five Hawks against four Maroons, and the latter were hard pressed to halt the Chicago wings.

The Blackhawks continued to carry the offensive right up to the Maroon cage at the opening of the third period, while the Maroons appeared to be content with turning them back. With the half way mark reached, the Maroons quit fooling and kept Gardiner dancing almost as much as Kerr had been doing.

HOLD LAST RITES FOR CORBETT IN NEW YORK TODAY

Hundreds Visit Bier of Ex-Champion Boxer.

New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—The great and the unknown, the rich and the poor, old friends and many who never had seen his face in life called today at the home of James J. Corbett to pay their last respects to the former heavyweight champion of the world who died yesterday after an illness of 18 days.

From early in the afternoon a constant stream of automobiles wended their way through the narrow streets of suburban Bayside to the big house above Little Neck bay where Corbett had lived for 30 years.

Funeral to Be Held Today.

Sloshing through the mud of the unpaved street they climbed the steps of the big house to the second floor where Corbett lay. Prayer beads were clasped in his hands. At one side two tall white candles burned and between them stood a cross. In a downstairs room flowers were piled high, last testimonials from the friends he counted by the thousand.

The body will be kept at the house until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Then it will be taken through the city to St. Malachy's church, in West 49th street, Manhattan, where Corbett's parish priest, Father Hayes of the Sacred Heart church in Bayside, will officiate at the last mass. Burial will be in Cypress Hills cemetery.

Pallbearers from Stage, Ring.

Prominent men of the ring and the stage, on both of which Corbett played a star's rôle, have been named as honorary pallbearers. Police arrangements were being made to handle the crowds expected to beslege the church.

Corbett often worshiped at St. Malachy's, called the "actors' church" because of the large number of theatrical celebrities who attend services there.

Corbett had been married twice. He had no children. Surviving, in addition to Mrs. Corbett, are a brother, Joe, once a major league pitcher of Los Angeles, and three sisters, Mrs. J. A. McInerny of San Francisco, and Miss Esther Corbett, and Mrs. J. A. Boyd, both of San Carlos, Cal.

Relatives to Miss Funeral.

Corbett's malady—cancer of the liver—was of such a nature that his death or recovery could not be forecast, so none of the four relatives in California came to his bedside. When his death did come, suddenly, it was felt that the strain on Mrs. Corbett of waiting for their arrival would be too great and none of them came east for the funeral.

SCHROEDER WINS 10,000 METER RACE AS MEET ENDS

TRONDHEIM, Norway, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Hans Engenestangen of Norway captured the world's all around amateur speed skating championship today, but the major share of the day's laurels went to Eddie Schroeder of Chicago.

Schroeder won the 10,000 meter race in 17 minutes, 43.6 seconds and boosted himself into fourth place in the final standings. The other event on the final day's program, the 1,500 meters, went to the Norwegian veteran, Clas Thunberg, in 2:22.8.

Engnestangen, by winning the 500 meters, placing third in the 1,500 and fourth in both the 5,000 and 10,000 meters, won the all around crown by a narrow margin from Michael Staksrud, also of Norway. Staksrud took three second places and one sixth today.

Schroeder won the 10,000 meters from Staksrud with Heiden third, Engnestangen fourth, Ballangrud fifth and Carlson sixth. In the 1,500 meters, Thunberg led home Staksrud, Engnestangen, Ballangrud, Taylor, and Schroeder in that order.

How to Play Ping-Pong

This is the second of a series of articles by Coleman Clark of Chicago, national ping-pong champion. Mr. Clark is a graduate of the University of Chicago, where he won major letters in basketball and tennis.

BY COLEMAN CLARK.
[National Champion.]

Now we are ready to take up the actual playing of the game. The first thing you will want to know is how to hold the racket.

The grip I use is commonly known as the tennis or palm grip. This method is used by most of the outstanding players of the world and is the one I would recommend. The grip should be high up the handle, as close to the blade as feels comfortable. The forefinger should extend outstretched along the border of the racket.

"Penholder" Grip Also Popular.

The other popular grip is called the "penholder" grip. In this case you grasp the handle as you would hold a pen. There are numerous variations of this particular form. Some prefer to use the thumb and index finger others the thumb and two fingers, the index and second finger. Any alteration which comes naturally should be adopted. The penholder grip is still used a great deal in the United States, especially in the middle west, but in Europe where pingpong is farther advanced than here it is losing vogue.

For those who are just taking up the game I suggest trying the tennis grip. If, after thorough trial, it does not adapt itself to your game, switch over to the other grip. If you are already a penholder player you might experiment with the tennis grip, but do not hesitate to go back to your style if you fail to become accustomed to the new one. I advocate the tennis grip as I believe it makes it easier to drive with speed and to execute the important cut and spin shots.

Perry Favors Tennis Style.

The chief foreign exponents of the tennis grip are Fred Perry of England, the famous tennis player, and Barna of Hungary, present continental champion. William Tilden, James Jacobson, George T. Bacon, and C. G. Schaad are among the Americans who favor this grip. Our outstanding players who use the penholder style are W. C. Wells Jr. of New York, one of the pioneers of the game, and Rushakoff, Work, and Fushami of Chicago.

The racket is in your hand, held firmly but not too tightly. The wrist is flexible—not rigid. We are now ready to play. Let us first consider the fundamental pingpong stroke, known as the top spin drive.

Stand in a comfortable position two or three feet behind the middle of the table. Spread the feet so as to insure firm balance and keep on your toes. Always be prepared to move quickly from one position to another. Don't plant yourself like a statue on one spot. Good pingpong requires quick action. The ball is passing over the net towards you. Keep your eye on it. This is especially important in pingpong, where the ball is small and its flight rapid. Consciously follow the ball with the eye until it strikes the racket. Don't look where you are going to hit it. If you do, you will give away the placement of your shot to your opponent. Besides, you may miss striking the ball altogether.

Less Sweeping than Tennis Stroke.

The fundamental pingpong stroke in some respects is similar to the one used in playing tennis, except that it is usually less sweeping and executed with much more lift to it. The ideal shot in pingpong is a fast, low ball with top spin imparted to it. This is attained by striking the ball with a quick upward movement with generous wrist action. Start the stroke low, about the level of the table, and slightly back and to the side of the body. Let the swing finish in front of the body a foot or more above the surface of the table. The extent of the all important "lift" or pull-up will decide the degree to which the ball will take a nosedive after passing the net.

On either backhand or forehand this is the fundamental stroke. Proficiency in this stroke is as necessary to sound pingpong as an adequate golf swing is to golf. Therefore, it would be well to learn this essential shot.

OHIO HAS CHANCE TO WIDEN LEAD IN BIG TEN TONIGHT

Buckeyes Seek 8th in Row; N. U. at Purdue.

Minnesota	0	5	.000	190	231
Chicago	0	8	.000	168	324

TONIGHT'S SCHEDULE.
Iowa at Ohio State.
Northwestern at Purdue.
Illinois at Wisconsin.
Indiana at Minnesota.
Chicago at Michigan.

This is the night the Western conference basketball championship should be decided. If this prediction doesn't come true, then Saturday in all probability will write finis to the race except for the motions of finishing the schedule.

The reasons are: Ohio State, undefeated in seven conference games, meets the up and coming third place Iowa Hawkeyes at Columbus. Northwestern, in second place with seven victories and one defeat, plays Purdue at Lafayette. If Ohio State whips Iowa and Purdue beats Northwestern, the Buckeyes will be far in front. Should both Ohio State and Northwestern win tonight, Iowa will have another crack at Ohio Saturday night, which, under these circumstances would not help Iowa but could give Northwestern a share in the championship.

Chance for Iowa to Tie.

The race will remain very much as it is if Iowa and Purdue win. This still would leave Ohio with a one game lead but Iowa then could tie for the lead with another victory over Ohio Saturday.

Ohio State's third one point victory was scored last Saturday night at Purdue, 28 to 27. While Ohio led in the closing minutes, a tie would have been created by Cottom's two free throws if Coach Lambert of the Boilermakers had not dashed on to the court and drawn a technical foul, which, when changed into a point at the penalty line, provided the margin of victory.

Northwestern raised its own single game record from 52 points to 57 points, again at the expense of Chicago, which met its eighth straight reverse. Joe Reiff, leading the conference in individual scoring, got 20 points, nine less than in the first of the series with Chicago. Elmer Johnson scored 18 points. About the only consolation the Maroons can find this season is that Minnesota shares last place with them. The Gophers were defeated by Illinois, 26 to 22.

Illinois Plays Badgers.

Other games tonight involve Illinois at Wisconsin; Indiana at Minnesota and Chicago at Michigan. Michigan, of course, should win, and with a standing of six victories and two defeats will be ready to take advantage of any opportunity that may develop from the Iowa-Ohio and Purdue-Northwestern games. Neither Michigan nor Northwestern plays Ohio State.

Reiff, who leads the scoring race with 102 points, needs 52 more points in four games—an average of 13—to tie Johnny Wooden, of Purdue, who set an all time mark last year. Reiff may have trouble getting his 13 points tonight at Purdue. In the first game between these schools, Northwestern won, 35 to 28, the difference in points being scored at the free throw line.

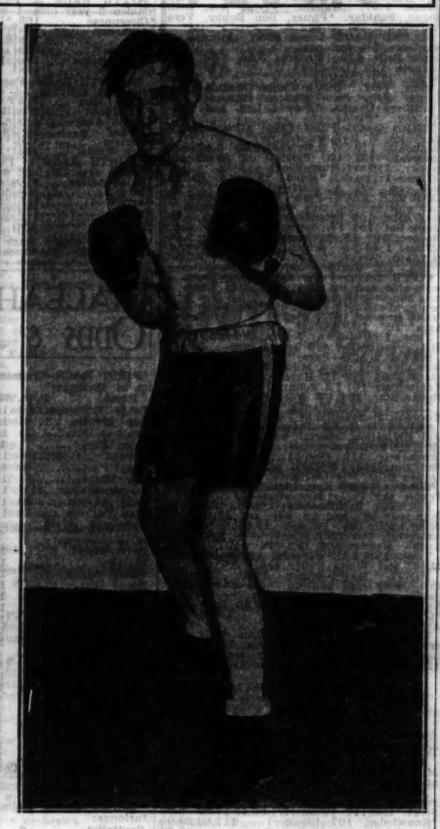
	G.	F.	P.	T.P.
Reiff, Northwestern	33	36	13	102
Johnson, Northwestern	32	13	18	77
Bennett, Illinois	26	16	13	68
Froschauer, Illinois	27	13	19	67
Garner, Michigan	27	11	17	55
Hosket, Ohio	22	19	14	63
Bastian, Iowa	22	15	23	59
Cottom, Purdue	22	10	10	54
Robinson, Minnesota	18	17	17	53
Krumholz, Iowa	18	17	14	53
Parsons, Chicago	21	10	16	52

THREE OF THE BOYS—AND PLENTY GOOD

Anthony Marcy of Loyola university, 1931 featherweight champion of the Catholic Youth organization, who will fight in the north side Golden Gloves trials. He will compete in the 126 pound Open division.



Billy Celebron is a two fisted fighter who gives fans and opponents plenty of action. He was runner-up to Johnny Phagan for the Golden Gloves welterweight championship last year. He is still a welterweight.

Duffers! Here's Your Chance to Win Golf Title

New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—The golf "duffer"—the man who shoots anywhere from 80 to 100 and up—is to have his inning.

A group of prominent golf officials today announced formation of the Handicap Golfers' Association of America, to promote a national handicap tournament among club golfers. They predict an entry list of 100,000.

Briefly the plan is this: A golfer belonging to any recognized club having its own course may play a round, during a specified period. His attested card, along with his club handicap, will be forwarded to national headquarters here. Club, state, sectional, and national winners will be tabulated.

Galleries thus might be treated to the spectacle of a golfer shooting a round in 110 and winning a national title.

All Chicagoland Thrills to Battles for Golden Gloves

BY FRENCH LANE.

It is doubtful if even the originators of THE TRIBUNE Golden Gloves tournament had any idea that it would reach the farflung proportions it has today. Traveling through the adjoining states and watching the preliminary bouts which precede the selection of every team that comes to Chicago, gives one a vivid conception of the enormity of it all.

Picture the vast territory that has become interested in Golden Gloves. Today, in contrast to the few hundred boys who competed for those first Golden Gloves five years ago, there is an army of lads representing every state in the middle west.

Crowds Grow Larger, Too.

Again, in contrast to the first Golden Gloves tournament, which created only enough interest to attract a few thousand spectators, comes the ever growing, present day throng of amateur boxing enthusiasts.

In each of the 23 cities where sectional teams are selected, as much enthusiasm is displayed for the local Golden Gloves program as that with which we are familiar in Chicago. The tournament in Danville, Ill., sponsored by the Commercial-News, or any one of the other outlying cities, holds just as much interest for the folks in Danville as the Golden Gloves tournament in Chicago does for its followers.

Elaborate preparations go along for weeks before these sectional events take place. Each little town and hamlet near these sectional centers sends in a few fighting representatives. With him go uncles, aunts and cousins, the village barber and the grocer, eager to cheer him along in victory or comfort him in defeat.

Receipts to Charity.

Not the least important aspect of these away-from-Chicago tournaments is the one of charity contributions corresponding to the charity character of the big mother tournament held in Chicago. For instance, the crippled children of Springfield, Ill., got the $1,500 profit of the Springfield State Register tournament. Milk funds, hospitals, hungry school kiddies, homes for the aged, and many other charities throughout the Golden Gloves territory have these sectional tournaments to thank for some of the biggest contributions of the year.

Relief and charity throughout the outlying Golden Gloves territory is benefited to an amount approaching $50,000 before Chicago even begins. Since Golden Gloves were introduced, Chicago's contribution has reached the high total of $175,000. Just as widespread in its effect and popularity in the east is THE TRIBUNE'S sister tournament, the New York Golden Gloves, sponsored by the New York Daily News.

The originators of the Golden Gloves plan had in mind also encouragement of physical perfection in the young men of the nation.

Country Cousins Get Tougher.

As the years go along this purpose is definitely being accomplished. The type of not only the champions out the boys who compete is higher each year. The boys from the hinterland no longer take a back seat for their cousins in the city, who may have had great advantages in mastering the manly art of self-defense.

WARNEKE GIVES HORNSBY CREDIT FOR HIS SUCCESS

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Speaking before a baseball school here, Lon Warneke, leading pitcher of the Chicago Cubs last season, today said that any credit he had achieved in baseball largely was due to the efforts of Rogers Hornsby, former Cub manager and now a member of the St. Louis National League club.

Warneke left today for Kansas City, where he will meet other members of the Chicago team on their way to the Pacific coast to begin spring training.

Durocher and Lombardi Sign with Cincinnati

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago's preliminary Golden Gloves campaign starts its final week tonight at Loyola university gymnasium at 7 o'clock. Six hundred and twenty-four amateur boxers registered in both novice and open divisions will report this afternoon between 2 and 6 o'clock to prepare for the three night struggle for qualifying positions in the Tournament of Champions.

The tremendous interest in Golden Gloves has forced installation of two rings. The meet also has been extended through Wednesday to accommodate the hundreds who believe they can win places on Chicago's team of 64 boxers which will face the winners from 23 out of town centers and the Catholic Youth champions in the Stadium bouts next week and those who expect to earn the right to continue among the 64 lads who will fight it out at the Stadium for the Novice championships of Chicago.

Entry List Larger.

Sixty cents, including the federal tax, is the price of admission each night. Seats are not reserved. At least 100 bouts will be held tonight and again tomorrow night. The finals of the qualifying rounds in both novice and open divisions are scheduled Wednesday night. There probably will be 50 bouts.

The north side entry barely exceeded the number of boys listed in the west side trials. Now, consider the record entry of 812 amateur boxers who will begin a three day tournament Wednesday night at White City. This total surpasses all previous marks for amateur boxing in a three day meet. The boxers who expect to compete at White City nearly equal Chicago's total entry in 1932.

Four Rings Wednesday!

Golden Gloves has grown beyond all expectations. Chicago's four sectional tournaments have drawn a total entry of 2,232, seven times the number which competed in Chicago's first Golden Gloves tournament in 1928.

On Wednesday night, when the north section finals are held in two rings at Loyola university, the White City tournament, in two rings, will begin. Thus, for the first time in history four rings will be in operation on one night in the same tourney.

At first glance this might seem an impossibility. It would be impossible were it not for the invaluable services of more than 100 men, who form the competent group of officials. Doctors, clerks, seconds, judges, timers, glove men, referees, door men, check room attendants and water boys—each has a specific duty to perform and each fits into the mechanism by which the tournament moves along steadily.

Medals for Novice Winners.

Such is Golden Gloves in Chicago as a whole. The mass of entries is made up of individual boxers many of them novices, each intent on winning a championship. The Novice divisions will reach its final eight bouts on March 1 at the Chicago Stadium. Gold and silver medals are the awards for these youngsters.

The more experienced fighters go

Campbell Finds Beach Too Rough for Test Today

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 19. (AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell tonight decided that the nine mile beach racing strip was too rough for him to attempt a test run at low tide tomorrow morning in his automobile. Westerly winds blew in from the ocean last night, causing tides that chopped up the beach in many places.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Stanley Hack, youthful third baseman of the Chicago Cubs, and amateur aviator, escaped without injury when his plane nosed over as he landed it here today. Two passengers flying with him also were unhurt, and the plane was damaged only slightly. Hack bought his plane a few days ago and announced he would fly from his home here to the Cubs' training camp at Catalina.

AZNAR, SPAIN'S LAST PREMIER UNDER KING, DIES

Once Prisoner of War in United States.

MADRID, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Admiral Juan Bautista Aznar, who was the last premier of Spain under the monarchy, died today. He was 63 years old. He had been suffering for some time from a chest ailment. He suffered an attack of uremia a week ago and this, followed by complications, caused his death. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

Admiral Aznar, who had been prominent in naval affairs practically his entire adult life, was premier when on April 14, 1931, King Alfonso abdicated and a republic was proclaimed. The abdication of the king followed within a few hours upon the resignation of the government of Premier Aznar, which advised the king to call in three leaders who had demanded a constitutional convention. Approximately at the same time Republican leaders issued an ultimatum demanding that the king declare a republic.

Interned in United States.

The admiral entered the San Fernando naval school when he was 14 years old. He saw service in the Philippines and in Cuba and also commanded a part of the fleet in the Melilla campaign. He was minister of the navy in September, 1923, when Primo de Rivera, former dictator, brought about the downfall of the government headed by Garcia Prieto.

He was a prisoner of war at the naval hospital in Norfolk, Va., in 1898. At that time he was lieutenant commander of the Spanish cruiser Vizcaya, which was sunk in July of that year with three other Spanish ships at Santiago, Cuba. During confinement there Aznar and some 30 other Spanish officers were given free run not only of the hospital but of Portsmouth and Norfolk as well, and were entertained by both naval authorities and civilians. Their normal internment was for a period of about ten weeks.

Politics Not His Line.

He became premier Feb. 18, 1931, when the government of Premier Berenguer fell. At the time he told newspaper men that since he had spent his life in serving Spain as a sailor he did not feel entirely at home in his new post. "I never have engaged in politics and I don't know how to go about it now," he said. "I was called by my king for this particular service at this particular time and of course I responded."

Among the decorations the admiral held were the great red cross of military merit and the order of the Golden Fleece. The latter was the highest honor the former monarchy could bestow. Although the post of captain general of the navy had been abolished by the Republican government, Admiral Aznar still held that title as an honorary gesture at the time of his death. The title now becomes extinct.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Justice and the Law

HAROLD TEEN—BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

SOCIAL CENTER STILL SERVING IN ITS 34TH YEAR

Association House Has Many Functions.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The visitor who steps across the threshold of Association house at 2150 West North avenue in late afternoon, hears singing and the sound of joyous talk as boys and girls hurry about their duties. These children are from poverty stricken homes. At Association house they learn to fashion their own clothing and to prepare low cost meals. Also they play basketball and pingpong and have other recreations.

Association house is one of the smaller social centers which look to the Emergency Welfare fund for supplementary help during these anxious times. It is one of 125 such charities which depend on a $7,500,000 fund to be raised by public contributions. Less than $5,000,000 has been raised since last October.

Must Care for Overflow.

"This year the relief agencies are better organized than in the two previous years, but we must take care of the overflow and the neglected fringe that is always overlooked," explained Edwin Eells, head resident. "This settlement has served this neighborhood 34 years, and now the neighborhood has reached nearly a mile radius with families we know in nearly every block.

"We know our people and they know we are always available in times of trouble. They trust us, and we trust them.

"As I analyze it, families in need are on the edge of a cliff. If they slip off, they are lost and become whining paupers. It is our job to keep them from sliding off. We give them a hold on their self-respect so they can actually carry through.

Ask for Advice.

"Last month 500 families came to Association house, but relief was given out to only 75 families. The remarkable thing is that they come for other things—for counsel in domestic troubles which may have been caused by unemployment, for the activities of Association house, to meet their friends and do their part. They know that if they are urgently in need we stand by ready and willing to help.

"The lazy man who just settles down and lives on his relief rations is the problem to be dealt with firmly and quickly," according to a recent article in the mimeographed house bulletin. "There is a growing sentiment among the idle against this minority of 'shirkers.'"

Association house has been under the direction of the extension board of the Presbyterian church since 1926, but its services are for people of all creeds.

ACCIDENT VICTIM RECOVERS WITH AID OF IRON LUNG

Leo Turck, 26 years old, 1410 South Harding avenue, was rapidly recovering in Frances Willard hospital yesterday after three days of treatment with a Drinker respirator. Injuries incurred in an automobile truck collision last Monday caused paralysis of the diaphragm and cut off Turck's breathing.

The young man was released from the county hospital, apparently without injury, after the accident on Monday, but was stricken with the paralysis on Friday. He was near death when Dr. S. I. Weiner arrived, but artificial respiration methods kept him alive until he reached the hospital.

Turck was removed from the "iron lung" for an hour Saturday night and yesterday was able to remain outside as long as four hours.

GEN. J. ALLEN, WHO BOUGHT FIRST ARMY AIRPLANE, IS DEAD

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Brig. Gen. James Allen, retired, who as former chief signal officer bought the first airplane for the United States army, died at 4 o'clock this morning at Walter Reed hospital. He was 83 years old. Paralysis was the cause of his death, which followed a lingering illness.

Funeral services will be held on Tuesday in the chapel at Fort Myer, preceding burial with military honors in the National cemetery at Arlington.

Born in La Porte, Ind., Feb. 13, 1849, and graduated from the United States Military academy in 1872, Gen. Allen concluded with his retirement in 1913 a long and distinguished record of service in the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, and Alaska, which began with Indian campaigns in the west and ended with the founding of the army air service. He laid the first cable from Seattle to Alaska.

ARREST PASTOR, CHURCH OFFICER FOR FIGHTING

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The Rev. Felix G. Robinson, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church By-the-Sea at Long Beach, L. I., and Charles W. Ackerman, president of the church board of trustees, were booked at the police station there this morning on charges of assault, following a row in the edifice.

What led to the quarrel, how many blows were struck and who struck them, the principals and members of the congregation refused to say. There was an unconfirmed report that the quarrel had its origin in a discussion of financial matters.

According to police, a telephone call was received at the station from an excited woman member of the congregation shortly after 10 a. m., about a half hour before the pastor was to open the Sabbath service. He had chosen for his sermon the subject, "What the Church Ought to Be."

A patrolman sent to the church found several women members virtually hysterical, and most of the men engaged in trying to smooth matters over. Mr. Ackerman was bleeding. His face was cut and bruised.

The policeman took the minister—who was unmarked—and Mr. Ackerman to the station. The belligerants made charges of assault, one against the other, and then Mr. Ackerman was taken to Long Beach hospital.

The minister was to have ascended the pulpit at 11 a. m., but it was 1 p. m. before the judge released him. The hearing was set for Feb. 26.

Fat Men
Mr. Clarence A. Case of Monterey Park, Calif., writes: "I've fought a tendency toward obesity since 33 years old (now 48) and have found Kruschen Salts the only satisfactory remedy. When the old belt begins to tighten I get back on Kruschen for a bottle or so and take off from 12 to 18 pounds easily and quickly." (July 18, 1932.)
To lose fat surely and SAFELY, take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning. Cut down on pastry and fatty meats.
But be sure to get Kruschen—your health comes first—a bottle that will last you 4 weeks costs but a few cents at any druggstore in the world—if not satisfied—money back.

Car Loadings and Power Make Advances.

New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Business reports and statistics of the last week showed maintenance of distinctly encouraging vitality, in the face of adverse financial developments.

The weekly freight carloadings and electric power consumption reports reflected the recent cold snap with larger than seasonal gains, and the mercantile reports indicated that trade volume was being well maintained.

Even in Michigan, where most of the banks were closed pending a holiday period in which their assets might be liquified and steps taken permanently to bolster them, the reports from automobile and retail businesses showed little curtailment. Elsewhere, there were some scattered gains, which obtained double importance in view of the normal sagging of business during February.

Auto Output Drops.

Of transcending importance was the publication on Wednesday of the national transportation committee's report.

In general, it met with considerable approval, even from railroad executives who were rather roundly scored for competitive wastefulness and for failure in good times to amortize debts of railroads.

The automobile industry recorded for the week ended Feb. 11 a further decline in production, which was attributed primarily to the influence of labor trouble, but in the week just passed there were gains in production by two lower priced manufacturers, and in Detroit it was stated that production schedules were still being filled, without serious interference, either from strikes or the bank moratorium.

Electric power production as reported for the latest week showed considerable improvement over the preceding week, the ouput figures being 1,482,509,000 kilowatt hours against 1,454,913,000. The weekly figure stood 6.1 per cent below the corresponding week of 1932 compared with 8.4 per cent the week before, an indication of improvement which, however, lost some of its force because of the incidence of the Lincoln birthday commemoration in different periods for the two years under comparison.

Carloadings Better.

Carloadings as shown for the latest week also showed a gain over the previous week, the totals being 501,320 against 483,192. The latest figure stood 10.7 per cent below the corresponding 1932 period against a spread of 15.8, but here also the comparison was somewhat distorted because of the Lincoln birthday holiday in different weeks under comparison.

The week-end mercantile reports were in agreement that business was stoutly resisting adverse news, and both spoke of betterment in some lines of merchandising, notably spring lines.

JAPAN'S FOREIGN TRADE SHARPLY UP IN JANUARY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 19.—Japan's foreign trade during January, 1933, amounted to 107,000,000 yen in export and to 173,000,000 yen in import, leaving 66,000,000 yen as an unfavorable balance of trade. Each item increased by about 50 per cent as compared with figures for January, 1932.

In the same comparison, exports showed a decrease of 9,000,000 yen in raw silk but indicate increases as follows: 16,000,000 yen in cotton fabrics, 1,800,000 yen in rayon fabrics, 1,800,000 yen in silk fabrics, 2,000,000 yen in wheat flour, and 1,500,000 yen in knitted goods. The imports increased by 24,000,000 yen in raw cotton, by 5,000,000 yen in wool, by 2,700,000 yen in beans, by 2,700,000 yen in iron, and by 2,000,000 yen in machinery.

The figures of Japan's foreign trade, classified by principal countries, in 1932 are as follows: Export to the United States, 445,00,000 yen with an import excess of 64,000,000 yen, which is a noticeable turn from the traditional trend of yielding a favorable trade balance with the United States: export to British India, 192,000,000 yen with an export excess of 75,000,000 yen; exports to the South Sea Islands, 159,000,000 yen with an export excess of 63,000,000 yen; export to Australia, 36,000,000 yen with an import excess of 97,000,000 yen; export to the United Kingdom, 59,000,000 yen with an import excess of 19,000,000 yen.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 19.—In the course of three years American trade with Argentina has sunk to insignificant proportions. According to statistical returns, in 1910 Argentina's purchases from the United States totaled 52,000,000 gold pesos while American purchases from Argentina totaled approximately 26,000,000 gold pesos. These figures increased during the world war until in 1920 they were 310,000,000 and 154,000,000 respectively.

With the resumption of trade with Europe after the war, the United States figures declined somewhat, but in 1929 they still reached the respectable sums of 227,000,000 and 94,000,000 gold pesos.

But with the inauguration of the Hawley-Smoot tariff in 1930, a decline set in which has been accentuated by the world crisis until in 1932 Argentine exports to the United States fell to approximately $12,000,000 and imports therefrom to $16,000,000.

South Bend Watch Co. Is Nearly Liquidated

Liquidation of the South Bend Watch company has been practically completed, according to Irving B. Eppenstein, who has been carrying out the work for the benefit of creditors. Chicago banks are the principal creditors. The liquidation is being carried out without resort to receivership or bankruptcy. Inventories and other assets are being sold. Creditors are receiving 50 per cent on their claims.

WHEAT TRADE BELIEVES PRICE TREND UPWARD

Crop Damage, Less U. S. Selling Cited.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Two important factors confront the wheat trade and are regarded as likely to have a strengthening influence on values and to cause a gradual enlargement in the speculative buying.

One factor is the unfavorable condition for the winter wheat crop in the southwest, with serious damage expected as a result of recent unprecedentedly low temperatures and no snow covering. The other is the growing belief that holdings by the Grain Stabilization corporation of cash wheat and futures and holdings by other farm board connections are gradually being liquidated. The selling has appeared on every bulge to around 48 cents for May and 49 cents for July.

Pit traders who watch developments say the selling has apparently come from farm board interests and has been executed by brokers who have been prominent in acting as their agents. Within the last few days trade has broadened sufficiently to absorb the offerings without the price being affected.

Traders More Optimistic.

At the close of last week the largest traders expressed the belief that the "governments selling" had lost its influence as a depressing factor and that the market's action showed it. The belief also was freely expressed that the farm board's holdings have been cut down to small proportions, and that were official figures given out prices would be more likely to advance than to decline. Such market action has occurred in periods when large local speculators have controlled the market for a long time and have sold out, the trade taking their load and the market assuming natural proportions.

It was said at the close of trading that should President George S. Milnor of the Grain Stabilization corporation publicly announce that government wheat had been disposed of the trade would be more disposed to take the bull side of the market. Neither Gov. Stone nor Mr. Milnor would make a statement regarding their position on Saturday, although they were asked to do so by press representatives.

Farm Board Believed Selling.

A month ago Mr. Milnor publicly announced that the condition of the wheat market did not warrant selling farm board holdings and that they would be withheld until market conditions improved. Ever since that time the trade has had it that selling was going on quietly. Holdings of futures at that time were estimated at 30,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels and cash wheat at 1,500,000 bushels. Estimates by grain traders on Saturday were that the government holdings were not more than 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels, and possibly less.

The Red Cross, which has given orders on over 73,000,000 bushels of wheat of its 85,000,000 bushels allotted by congress for charitable distribution, is said to have about 10,000,000 bushels left.

Statistical Situation Strong.

Europe is taking liberal quantities of wheat from Canada, Argentina and Australia. The orient has been a large buyer of Australian and Argentine wheat. The peak of the southern hemisphere movement is over. The visible supply in the United States is said to be around 53,000,000 bushels less than last year.

Conditions in London sterling exchange and Canadian exchange markets are important factors and will continue so until financial affairs are more settled. There is some uneasiness regarding the approaching change of the administration at Washington. In the meantime, the grain trade is expected to remain nervous, but short sales on declines are not advised by trade leaders. Closing prices on Saturday were ⅛ to ¼ of a cent lower than the previous week, May in Chicago being 47⅝ cents, July, 48⅝ to 48¼ cents, and September, 49½ cents. Winnipeg was strong all week with export sales, mostly by way of Vancouver, estimated around 10,000,000 bushels. Closing prices in Winnipeg and Liverpool were about the same as a week ago. Country Sells Corn Freely.

Country holders, mostly through Illinois and Indiana, and a few in Ohio, sold more than 1,500,000 bushels of cash corn, mostly to industries, last week. Corn was mainly for shipment within 5 days, and the first run of importance reached Chicago on Saturday, being 227 cars, whereas usually the run has been under 100 cars daily.

Closing trades on May corn were 25⅛ to 25⅝ cents; July, 27⅛ to 27½ cents; September, 28¾ cents; net losses being ¼ to ⅜ cent. Prices follow:

Scattered buying of oat futures by cash handlers furnished a large part of the business. At times the same interests were also credited with selling. May oats held between 16⅝ and 17 cents and closed at 16⅜ to 16⅝ cents. Only a few trades were made in the more deferred deliveries and the finish was at net loss of ⅜ cent.

Neglect featured the rye trade, but May closed ½ cent higher at 34⅝ cents and July ¼ cent lower at 34 cents.

Ancients Found Barter Crude; Devised Money

BY REUBEN D. CAHN.

When a schoolboy swaps his galluses and an apple for some choice marbles and butts of a cigaret he is engaging in a trade practice which goes back pretty far in history. Direct exchange of commodities known as barter was the means by which the earliest exchanges were affected.

But barter makes difficult the division of labor; that is, that scheme of having some folks do some things and other folks other things. The bartering shoemaker who is in need of some feed for his horse must not only find the farmer who has feed, but one who also wants a pair of shoes. But it isn't that simple. The farmer with a stock of feed, while in need of footwear, may have a still greater need or desire for some article other than shoes which he expects to procure in trade for his horse feed. And there is also the question of the relationship of feed to shoes: how much oats equals a pair of kicks?

Barter Wastes Time.

Barter is a waste of time in that it introduces the necessity not only of finding an individual who has what you want and wants what you have, but one that you can strike a bargain with.

Man wasn't long out of the tree before ways were found for surmounting these difficulties. In every tribe some commodities came to be generally prized and acceptable to nearly all persons. These came to be used as the means for expressing the value of other things and for effecting trades. Those who had articles to dispose of would accept the commonly prized articles, and those who would buy knew that they could do so by offering in trade a certain amount of the article of generally recognized value. The shoemaker could sell shoes to the weaver for some of the medium of exchange and at his own convenience he could use his receipts to buy from the farmer and from others. Such was the origin of money.

Money Takes Varied Forms.

A great variety of articles have served as money. When white men came to America they found the Indians using strings of wampum as a medium of exchange. These strings of beads had value and were acceptable to every Indian, because every Indian desired to be decorated. Among other hunting tribes, skins of animals were the medium of exchange.

Among pastoral peoples, cattle and sheep were generally recogonized as valuable, and were used in making exchanges. In Africa, cubes of salt have been used. Tea has been employed for the purpose in parts of Asia. In Virginia, tobacco long served as the standard of value. Other commodities which have constituted money, include rice, dates, cocoanuts, cowry shells and many metals.

The most common misconception of money arises from a failure to recognize that money did not originate with the government. It was an article of such generally recognized worth that it would be effectively used for a medium of exchange. Its use as such developed from the customs of individuals.

Money Based on Weight.

Money was and is a commodity which circulates by weight, as do other commodities. It has value because of its intrinsic worth, not because of what a government may call it. The very name of coins can be traced back to units of measurement, in the case of metals, units of weight. The shekel of the Hebrews was a weight. The as of the Romans was originally an ingot of copper, supposed to weigh an as. The livre of the French, the Spanish peso, the English pound, the German mark, were all originally names of weights.

If in their later years the monetary units did not weigh as much as origin of their names suggests, the fault lies with the kings who debased the coins below their original weights.

FARMERS SCAN FLAX, HEMP AS PROFIT CROPS

Midwest Trying to Regain Markets.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The possibilities of gaining for American farmers the domestic market for products made from flax and hemp are being considered this week in at least two midwest states.

At present the acreage devoted to these two crops is slight compared with that in wheat, cotton, corn, or the other major field crops. Flax was once grown in considerable amounts in the northwest, but due to its limited market and more difficult production, it gave way to wheat, the investigators find.

One group of farmers interested in reviving flax production is located in central Iowa. They held a meeting in Des Moines last Tuesday, during the course of which several growers outlined their favorable experiences in producing flax for seed. The seed is used in producing linseed oil, chiefly for the paint industry.

Sees Larger Profits.

Flax production may profitably be increased to some extent in Iowa, according to R. H. Porter, crop specialist at Iowa State college, who spoke at the Des Moines meeting. Profits per acre from flax have averaged higher in the last 12 years than those from oats, barley, or wheat.

Many corn belt farmers have been substituting flax for part of their oats or other grain acreage in recent years. They report yields of 4 to 10 bushels of seed per acre. In 1931 the price paid to farmers for flaxseed was about $1.18 per bushel, and in 1932 about 82 cents a bushel. There were seasons in the last ten years when the farm price reached $2.88.

As is the case in soy beans, the farmers growing flax either produce fiber or seed. As yet the market for the fiber is restricted, and most of the linen used in the United States is imported. Less than 5 million acres are devoted to the crop.

Imports Exceed Home Output.

Latest available records indicate that the United States is importing flaxseed or linseed oil in terms of seed amounting annually to more than 18 million bushels, compared to the 12 million bushels grown in this country. The by-product in producing oil is linseed oilmeal or cake, used in dairy feeds.

Dr. W. L. Burlison, head of the agronomy departments at the University of Illinois, writes that "there seems to be possibilities here" in referring to potential market developments for flax. He indicates that the state college of agriculture will study flax this year, possibly hemp also.

Hemp, one of the oldest known textile fibers, has been an important crop in world trade for centuries. The main use of the hemp fiber has been in ropes, twines, homespun, canvas, burlap, and marine cordage. It has been largely replaced by jute and cotton for most canvas, twine, and burlap. Marine cordage now is largely made of abaca, a Manila hemp which makes lighter ropes that float in water and resist action of salty water.

Little Hemp Produced.

Hemp now is almost an unknown crop with American farmers, except for a few in Wisconsin, Illinois, and Kentucky who grow it to be made into some twines, ham strings, webbing yarns, packing material, and oakum. These farmers grow a dewretted hemp, the total production in this country being about 800 to 1,100 tons a year.

Imports of hemp are twice as great, but the entire domestic hemp market has declined rapidly since 1914.

PARAMOUNT PUBLIX COMMITTEES ASKING DEPOSIT OF BONDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—The protective committees recently organized for the holders of bonds and common stock of the Paramount Publix corporation have sent out letters requesting the deposit of the various securities before the hearing in the United States District court for the southern district of New York on March 17, at which it will be determined whether the receivership for the company will be made permanent. [Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—The Westinghouse Electric International company has received an order for electrical equipment for Mexico City's tallest office building, now under construction, which will have fifteen stories and rise to a height of 183 feet. High-speed elevators, lighting fixtures and a switchboard are included in the order.

GOOD OUTWEIGHS BAD IN CHICAGO'S TRADE, COMMERCE BODY SAYS

A slight let up in demands on local department stores, a definite improvement in the steel industry, new gains in electric power output and further increases in employment as a result of the share-the-work movement, characterized the last week in Chicago, according to trade observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

With warmer weather, retail profit sales held to slightly lower levels. This fact was offset somewhat by the sharp increase in purchases due to the school holiday on Lincoln's birthday. Buying was then well distributed among the apparel and household departments. Wholesale houses continued to experience an upturn in business as a result of the stimulus to trade given by the recent meeting of the Interstate Merchants council.

The steel business during the last week witnessed the most definite improvement so far this year, partly due to automobile requirements, according to an official survey. Inquiries also increased, and while the railroads did little steel buying, some western roads contracted for small amounts of malleable castings in the Chicago district. This demand contributed to an increase in local pig iron shipments which are now running 20 per cent higher than the January rate.

As a result of the latest efforts of the share-the-work movement in Illinois, more than 74 thousand workers are now on pay rolls who otherwise would have been without work. Over 4,000 organizations in Illinois are now participating in this movement.

Huge Surplus of Gold Piled Up by Nation

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—Almost 1 billion 400 million dollars of excess gold is lying in the twelve federal reserve banks ready to repel foreign gold raids or internal banking disturbances, federal reserve board reports revealed today.

In the last month American gold stocks have fallen by $55,000,000 and 252 million dollars in additional money has been demanded for additional domestic use, but the reserve banks still hold $1,399,408,000 of "free" gold.

At present all but $108,509,000 of the excess gold is tied up as collateral behind federal reserve notes and deposits, but it can be freed at a moment's notice by invoking the Glass-Steagall act which congress recently extended, board experts point out.

Huge Gold Surplus.

Reserve banks have $2,447,357,000 worth of gold behind their notes now, but that total could legally be cut to $1,156,458,000 tomorrow if the necessity arose. Only a 40 per cent gold reserve need be held behind the notes, and all the gold above $1,156,458,000 can be freed by the substitution of government securities and commercial paper.

By freeing this unnecessarily large amount of gold note collateral the reserve banks could run their excess gold reserve up from $108,509,000 to almost $1,400,000,000 overnight.

Must Be Left in Vaults.

Approximately $831,517,000 worth of gold and the rest of the gold now behind notes would have to be left in the vaults to secure deposits with the reserve banks and the note circulation.

In other words, the gold requirements of the reserve banks now total $1,987,975,000 and its total gold reserves amount of $3,387,383,000, leaving a potential excess of $1,399,408,000. The banks are free to use this huge sum as they wish, and at present they are choosing to pile it up behind note circulation, where it can be freed immediately by the substitution of government securities.

MERCK & CO. NET GAINS; WORKERS KEPT ON PAY ROLL

Merck & Co., manufacturing chemists, report a net income, after all charges, of $582,072 for 1932 compared with $408,119 in 1931. Current assets as of Dec. 31, 1932, were $5,328,528 against current liabilities of $401,458. Current assets for the same period in 1931 were $5,624,300 against current liabilities of $378,186.

George W. Merck, president of the company, says the increase in profits was due to economies as sales declined. He states that it was possible to keep practically the entire staff of employés on the pay roll as a result of employment on a straight five day week or stagger system.

The company expended $135,083 on research work and has started the construction of a new research laboratory at Rahway, New Jersey, which is to represent an investment of approximately $200,000.

WALL ST. WILL FORGET JOLTS IF REPEAL WINS

Congress Holds Key, Traders Say.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—Emerging from one of the most trying weeks in the last four years, the stock market, as the new week dawns, looks hopefully to Washington to salve some of the hurts it has received from the Michigan bank disturbance, the attempt to assassinate President Elect Roosevelt, the European raid on the dollar and a dozen other blows of lesser importance.

If the house will only pass the repeal proposal—and yesterday's advices from the nation's capital indicated that the chances for such action are excellent—traders feel they will be able to forgive and forget a lot of wrongs suffered from other quarters here of late. The opinion has been widely held in responsible Wall street circles for a long time that few things would prove more beneficial, not only to the securities markets of the country but to business in general, than the repeal of prohibition.

Skeptical on Repeal.

Up to within the last few days, however, hopes of any such godsend at this session of congress were meager. Most commentators, indeed, had despaired of any "sane" legislation of whatever character from the "lame duck" bunch. Moreover, many of them have been guessing rather gloomily that it might be overstepping the bounds of probability to hope for legalized beer or liquor and the taxes that sale of them would bring and the work to untold thousands their manufacture would give at the special session which the new President is practically certain to call for early spring—probably for March or April.

The senate's approval of the proposal late in the week, more than anything else, enabled the market to shake itself together after the bank moratorium upset and start it to recover some of its lost ground. The averages recovered nearly a point on Friday, following the solons' vote on Thursday, and held around their newly won position through yesterday's session despite a feeling that the house might duplicate its record at the opening of the session and fail to muster the necessary two-thirds majority.

Good News Comes Late.

News of the Republicans' bloc's decision to support the proposal when it comes up Monday, and assurances that the Democrats would be able to show increased strength, did not come

A Tradition in Financial service that has come to be counted on by many firms and families

IT IS a policy of The Northern Trust Company to keep its service simple and direct. For its customers it tries to do all that a conservative financial institution can do —all that is consistent with sound banking.

Many firms and families have come to count upon this established concept of service.

Some of these customers use many of the departments of The Northern Trust Company. They include conservative business heads who find this bank co-operates closely and directly in matters of commercial banking. They include men and women who carry here their personal checking accounts, as well as heads of families who look to this company to carry their plans for their estates down through the years.

And there are many families who have entrusted their savings to the bank.

The Northern Trust Company feels that all of these customers desire to find here the same character. A conservatism, an unchanging idea of banking and trust relationships, an earnest effort to serve are common to all departments.

Those to whom such ideas seem practical are invited to use the facilities of the institution. There are five departments: Banking for commercial and personal checking accounts, Trust, Savings, Bond and Safe Deposit.

RAIL EQUIPMENT MAKERS EXPECT BETTER DEMAND

Cheered by Report of National Group.

New York, Feb. 19.—Purveyors of materials and equipment to the railroads—one of the nation's leading consumers of such products as steel, iron and lumber—have been spurred to new hope this week by the report of the national transportation committee.

While recommending the scrapping of much obsolete and duplicating equipment and urging cooperative economies which may result in the abandonment of thousands of miles of trackage and the actual running of fewer trains, the committee asserted that the transportation equipment should be brought up to date.

But the railways have been bending every effort to curtail their expenditures and have been making old equipment do wherever possible. The American railroads, in fact, did not order one new locomotive in 1932.

"It cannot be fairly said," the committee reported, "that railroad advance in applied science is abreast of that in other industrial fields."

Equipment Buying Encouraged.

In its emergency recommendations, the committee urged revision of bankruptcy procedure to permit scaling down of some unwieldy capital structures. Thus, by reduction of fixed charges, these roads could use a larger portion of their revenues to renovate their equipment.

Furthermore, the committee recommended the repeal, retroactively, of the recapture clause. This clause of the transportation act of 1920, according to railroad authorities, has made railroad managements wary of making such profits as may have permitted more rapid improvements in service, trackage and rolling stock. Also, presumably, the more prosperous carriers were content to go along with less efficient equipment.

The roads have been cool to suggestions that they take advantage of Reconstruction Finance corporation credit to renovate their rolling stock, arguing that with the current volume of traffic, they actually have much more equipment in good repair than they can use.

But equipment makers insist that a large potential demand is being built up. William H. Woodin, chairman of the American Locomotive company, in his annual report to stockholders, pointed out that railroads spent only about $1,200,000,000 in the maintenance of equipment in 1929, and only half that in 1932. "This serious curtailment," he said, "clearly indicates the potential demand which must be met as soon as any increase in traffic occurs."

Prepare for Future.

Mr. Woodin explained that his company was preparing for a new day in transportation, continuing his program of research and development, feeling that the future development of the company is dependent upon ability to furnish thoroughly modern equipment and to anticipate the requirements of the rapidly changing transportation world.

A special survey of the railroad situation by Moody's Service points out that in the five years up to and including 1929, railroad expenditures for maintenance were large, so the beginning of the depression found equipment in excellent shape, but this authority expresses doubt that it will be possible to keep such expenditures at current low levels. "The probability is," it says, "that the next several years will witness an increase in maintenance charges, regardless of traffic."

A tabulation of Moody's of operating revenues, expenditures for maintenance of way, and for maintenance of equipment for several recent years, with 1932 estimated, follows [in units of $1,000,000]:
